Good Money, Silly Words.

CARRYING water on both shoulders is hard. Carrying water on one shoulder, light wine and beer on the other, is harder. Democrats at Houston find themselves with a wild prohibition debate on their hands before the convention starts.

IT WILL take good management to harmonize the solid dry South and big wet Northern cities.

The Republicans simply went dry, trusting the nation's common sense to realize that to talk dry does not mean to be dry.

PRINCE ALEXANDER DABISCHA KOTROMANICZ plans to swoop down on Belgrade and make himself king. He will swoop, literally, if his plans work out, going by airplane, well escorted, taking advantage of the riots, following an attempt to murder Raditch.

THE Prince has recently been a chauffeur in Berlin. But many princes have had to disgrace themselves with honest work since the big war. And any sort of man can become ruler, if he has it in him. The present Shah of Persia was recently employed in British stables. And the ruler of Manchuria, recently blown into the other world by a bomb under his railway carriage, was a modest Chinese brigand.

AMERICAN money is restoring the magnificent Louvain Library, and American foolishness insists on disfiguring the good work with this inscription, "Destroyed by German Fury; Restored by American Generosity."

MONSIGNOR P. LADEUZE, rector of Louvain University, objects to the inscription because it keeps alive war hatreds. But the American architect, who invented the boastful, silly inscription, insists that it must remain.

IT WOULD seem that Louvain might decide the question. Anyhow, the foolish lettering can be easily chiseled off later. If Germany will go on paying $500,000,000 a year gold to the Allies, in atonement for the Kaiser's foolishness, that ought to satisfy.

LONG ago Franklin sent a kite toward the clouds and proved that electricity and lightning are the same thing.

What that thing is, men do not know yet. But they do know how to control and use it.

YESTERDAY, at the National Capital, within sight of Washington's Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, electricity was used to kill three young men in Washington's brand new electric chair.

Franklin would be surprised to know what his kite experiment has produced. A great nation's capital abolishing the gallows and substituting an electric killing machine does itself no honor.

IN GERMANY, every day on the average, 230 apply for patents, and the practical German mind rarely seeks to protect foolish ideas. Germany's revival will come largely from her patent office, from thinking, highly educated Germans leading the world in chemistry and in many lines.

The greatest mine of wealth, and the only mine inexhaustible, is the human mind. One hour's concentrated thinking may mean billions in wealth for the world. Use your brain.

SLEEPY days in Wall Street lately. The patient, after a bad attack of hysteria, is resting quietly, occasionally asking, "Where am I?"

MANY citizens have decided if they ever get another dollar to keep it. There is nothing like a financial "shake out" to confirm the impression that a dollar in the bank is worth several on margin.

THERE is no money in stock gambling or any other gambling. If by accident you win one lay, you lose more the next.

Old William R. Travers, looking at the brokers' yachts in Newport harbor, asked: "Where are the customers' yachts?" There were not any.

A BANK robbery was big news in old days. Now four men hold up a bank in St. Paul, run off with the money, and, to newspapers in other cities, that is "worth" just four lines. Ten Mexican troops, 22 "rebels" are killed in Mexican fighting, with many wounded, and that calls for two paragraphs. The human mind gets used to anything, and will even joke about the plague, as the wagons carry off the dead.

DEMOCRATS, drafting a plank "to get the farm vote," deserve credit for optimism.

When the time comes to talk the farmers talk in the good old way. And when it comes to voting, they vote in the good old way.

It takes a mental effort to change your talking or voting, and mental effort is painful.

DEMOCRATS believe that the nation is excited about the oil scandal, and that the nation is thirsty, and demands wine and beer.

If the Democrats are right about those things they have two issues and should develop them. If they are wrong no appeal to farmers will do any good.

CRASH KILLS 3 U. S. MARINES

FILE, Va., June 23.—A giant Marine Corps monoplane en route to the Nicaragua fighting front nosed-dived into a field near here at 2:30 a. m. today, killing three men, including Maj. Charles A. Lutz, marine speed champion, and seriously injuring the fourth man of the crew.

Maj. Lutz, who recently won the Curtiss marine speed trophy, and Lieut. H. T. Busby, were instantly killed. Machinists' mate Reeder Nichols died on the field two hours later without regaining consciousness. The fourth member, Corp. D. C. McChesney, seriously injured, was taken to a nearby farm house.

The plane, which left Washington a little more than an hour before, was trying to make a landing in the field, witnesses said. It dove from a low altitude and was badly smashed.

It was foggy here, although the big tri-motored plane left Anacostia Field, Washington, in clear weather. This little town is about 100 miles directly south of Washington, on the airline to Richmond.

TOWN AWAKENED

Residents of this town were awakened by the roar of the motors as the big plane passed over the place early this morning. Some arose to see the plane go in a nose dive after circling the town several times, presumably in an attempt to land. Arriving on the scene soon after the crash, they found the bodies of Maj. Lutz and Lieut. Busby 50 feet from the wreckage.

Corp. McChesney told some of the eyewitnesses of the crash that he did not know what to attribute the accident to, as "we had reached the earth before I was aware of any trouble."

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP.)—Maj. Charles A. Lutz, Marine Corps aviator, who started for Managua in a tri-motored transport plane early today, Lieut. H. T. Busby, and a corporal, were killed when their plane crashed near Bowling Green,, Va., en route to Miami, the Navy was informed today.

Maj. Lutz, accompanied by Busby and Corporals D. C. McChesney, and Reeder Nichols, departed from the naval air station at Anacostia at 1:05 o'clock this morning. He had planned to fly to Miami today and continue on to Managua, where he was to have

OLYMPIA FIELDS, Ill., June 23.—(AP.)—An ominous sky drizzled rain over the greenswards of Olympia Fields' No. 4 course when the first pair teed off for the penultimate round of the national open golf championship today.

A brisk breeze also swept across the links, and, while the weather forecast had been for showers, the layman's eye saw nothing in the actual conditions but an all-day rain and sodden turf. In spite of the untoward prospects when Billy Burke of New York and Rial Rolfe, a Chicago amateur, teed off at 8:30 for the first of today's two rounds, a goodly gallery of rain-coated onlookers had assembled, determined to see the golf and let the cleaner and presser take care of the aftermath.

Burke got two pars and a birdie at the start, but the next few players to pass the bird hole were from one to three above par, three of them taking 6 on the 530-yard first hole. Burke got a second birdie at the fourth and passed the sixth two under par.

Liner Robbed Of $500,000

International News Service.

LONDON, June 23.—A bold registered mail robbery upon the United States liner Leviathan, in which the loot is conservatively estimated at $500,000, was discovered today when the rifled mail bags reached here from Southampton.

Scotland Yard detectives believe that the crime was committed before the mail sacks were placed aboard the liner in New York. The American postal authorities were immediately notified.

The Leviathan reached Southampton last night and the bags were immediately dispatched to London, reaching the provincial sorting offices shortly after 1 o'clock. As the seals were apparently intact, the clerks suspected nothing until the sacks were opened. Then the sorters found every letter and parcel neatly split and the contents missing.

Scotland Yard was at once notified and detailed detectives to the case. The detectives declared that the crime could not have been committed while the mail was en route from Southampton to this city, as the time was too short.

Scotland Yard was given a complete list of persons on the liner and a chief inspector was sent on from London.

Some of the mail bags contained jewelry and others bank notes, checks, bank drafts and bills of exchange totaling thousands of dollars.

RIOTING INTERRUPTS DANCE MARATHON

A battle between two trainers lent spice to the dance derby in Duquesne Garden early today. Hysterical from loss of sleep, it was explained by the management, the two men put on a hectic battle for a few minutes until the police arrived, separated the combatants and, after a short time, "shooed" them out into the chill night air.

Late yesterday an attack by a weary trainer, who resented the disqualification of his protege, resulted in a riot call being sent to the Oakland police station. The trainer attacked Dr. L. M. Woodburn, an aide.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., June 23.—(A.P.)—Col. Charles Lindbergh, for the second time in 24 hours today made a landing in the Wyoming Valley with his NX-4215 plane.

He took off from an open field this morning near Coxton yards of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at 5:46 o'clock for New York, but fog over the Alleghenies was so thick that the famous flier decided to return to Coxton to await better visibility. The second landing was made at 7:45 o'clock.

Lindy spent the night at the Railroad Y. M. C. A. in Coxton, refusing a score of invitations to spend the night in palatial homes in the valley.

Lindbergh's second landing was as spectacular as the first, which was made last night shortly after

CRANDALL HITS PAY DIRT

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, June 23.—Milton D. Crandall's dance derby of the century has bloomed from a wilting flower in the Garden to one of the sensations of the year in dear old New York. What, for the first week, looked like another Pyle bloomer, has grown in such proportions the last three days that there is no longer doubt that Pittsburgh's boy promoter will need a larger trunk to haul away his profits.

At 8 o'clock this morning, as the dancers entered their two hundred and ninety-eighth hour, 13 couples remained on the floor, and of this number six are from the promoter's home town. They are: Tommy Nolan and Anna King, Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque, Eddie McGovern and Mae Farland, William Bush and Mary Promitis, Charlie McMillen and Elsie Sheiff and Robert Schade and Rae Mac-

SWEDISH PLANE DROPS NOBILE PARTY SUPPLIES

ROME, June 23.—(AP.)—The Stefani News Agency announced today that the big Swedish tri-motored Junkers plane reached Gen. Nobile and his party at 8:30 p. m. Friday and left him provisions, arms, floating apparatus and radio accumulators.

The plane was in charge of the Swedish pilot Tornberg.

It set out from Virgo Bay and on its return the north coast of Northeastland between Cape Platen and Cape Leigh Smith was explored minutely, without any trace being found of the Mariano-Zappi-Malmgreen group—the three who left Nobile to search on foot for land.

Pilot Tornberg informed Captain Romagna of the Citta Di Milano that he had in mind an attempt to land on the ice near Nobile with a plane equipped with ice runners and take away the six men there, and he asked that the Citta Di Milano notify the stranded men of his intentions.

Captain Romagna thanked him and asked him to collaborate also in the search for the seven men believed still with the dirigible Italia.

The physician ruled he was not in condition to continue the dance and then the battle started, with the dancer's trainer taking a punch at the physician. Other dancers in the contest took sides with the disqualified couple and the scene become so turbulent that a riot call was sent to Oakland station.

With the fireworks being given by trainers, the dancers swung into their 232d hour at noon today, 13 couples being left on the floor. Two dropped out early this morning, Maria Fretnik and August Pisano, and Minnie Angel and Tony Feirante, all of East Liberty.

Tonight the survivors will be taken aboard the Japanese Garden pleasure boat and towed to the middle of the Monogahela River to dance without breaking the Sabbath blue laws.

Out in Motor Square Garden, where the Negroes are holding their marathon, four couples were on the floor at noon with a time mark of 299 hours, and were aiming at the Academy Theater record of 303 hours. They are due to pass that mark this evening, but whether the promoter will be able to take his dancers aboard a boat over Sunday to continue adding hours to the record is another matter. Dollars have not been rolling in so fast at Motor Square.

SMITH WON'T FIGHT FOR WET PLANK, AIDES SAY

By RAYMOND I. BORST.
International News Service.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—Gov. Al Smith has no intention of demanding a wet plank in the Democratic platform, and some of his close friends are quietly laughing up their sleeves at all the "fuss" being made by the drys, according to the reports in circulation at the Smith headquarters today.

Although Gov. Smith personally believes the Volstead law should be modified, it was pointed out by members of his board of strategy that he has repeatedly declared for strict enforcement of all laws.

AL FOR ENFORCEMENT

There has been persistent report at the Smith headquarters for the last 24 hours that the Governor will approve the writing into the platform of a plank declaring for a rigid enforcement of all laws, but making no specific mention of either the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead law.

Because of repeated public declarations made by Smith in the last two years in which he asserted that all laws should be strictly enforced, his managers are said to feel that it will not embarrass him as a presidential candidate to run upon a platform declaring for rigid law enforcement.

Judge George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany Hall, and a half dozen other leaders in that famous Democratic organization are here to do all they can in a quiet way to help nominate Gov. Smith, but they are making it a point not to discuss prohibition.

Both Judge Olvany and George R. Van Namee, pre-convention manager for the New York executive, have made it plain that there is no one in Houston who has the authority to speak for Smith on prohibition and that when the proper time arrives the Governor will make known his views either through a public statement or by message to the New York delegation.

Efforts to induce Judge Olvany to give some hint as to what New York, or in other words, what Gov. Smith intends to do about prohibition, were futile.

"I don't think we have any plans yet," was all the Tammany Hall Chieftain would say.

GIRL PLANE SPIRITED AWAY

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP.)—The monoplane North Star, purchased by Mrs. James A. Stillman for the projected trans-Atlantic flight of Thea Rasche, rested today at Hadley Field, N. J., safely outside the jurisdiction of the New York court.

The plane was flown there yesterday from Curtiss Field, Long Island, while lawyers for Miss Rasche's previous backers were arguing a motion in Supreme Court which would have made permanent their temporary injunction to prevent her ocean flight.

William Winston, Curtiss pilot, was at the controls of the Bellanca when it took off from Curtiss Field shortly before nightfall for an unannounced destination. Mrs. Stillman, arriving at the field shortly after the takeoff, denied she knew where Winston was flying. A few hours later, however, it was learned the plane had been landed at Hadley Field.

Supreme Court Justice Valente reserved decision on a motion to make the injunction against Miss Rasche permanent.

Power Trust School Invasion Revealed.

SUPPLIED BOOKS TO PUPILS

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Prodigious feats of propaganda performed by the so-called power trust in bringing countless southern editors to "see the light," and banishing public suspicions of stock manipulation, were disclosed before the Federal Trade Commission yesterday.

Guy P. Newburn, director of the Tennessee Public Service Information Bureau, told the commission how public school children in that state came to be taught that utilities "can make no 'profits' in the sense other businesses do."

Newburn's testimony was as witness in the utilities investigation followed by a day that of J. B. Sheridan of St. Louis, who told in confidential letters how certain utility kings made millions speculating in utility properties and securities. Newburn admitted that the "no profit" statement was an "error," but asserted he knew nothing of it until last week.

The "accurate information" that Newburn imparted to the children was shown to have come from utility propaganda mills in New York. Three books, of which 437 sets were distributed in schools and 51 in libraries, all showed the Tennessee bureau as their source.

Newburn testified that he had ordered them through American Gas Association headquarters.

"It isn't selfish interest we have," said Newburn. "It's a service to the children of the state."

Tennessee experienced a thunderous fight a few years ago over abolishment of its state regulating commission.

A governor favored this step and with his support a bill passed the lower House. A last-ditch fight by the utility companies was required to defeat it, Newburn's records showed. Now their textbooks attribute the "no profit" condition to the effectiveness of regulation.

Power lobby plans to "use the service" of an organization distributing news to all parts of the country were disclosed. Newburn denied they involved a "subsidy." He was vague under questioning about the "service" the lobby was to get.

Newburn had written J. S. S. Richardson, chief propogandist of the lobby, on January 6 last:

"In the early part of December Mr. W. J. Baldwin, of the Alabama Power Company, wrote you regarding the newspaper service supplied by Mr. Marcy B. Darnell, of Florence, Ala., whom you met while in Birmingham December 1.

"I am taking this occasion to add my word of commendation for Mr. Darnell's service. We have been getting this service for about two years and I have watched it very closely. It is a splendid service for weekly newspapers and it is surprising to know the large volume of his stuff that is utilized.

"If your committee can work out a plan to use this service, I am sure it will be well worth while."

Harry Schadler, William McFarland, Arthur McNally and Norman Masters had more "goodies" to eat—they admitted it!—than they had capacities. Just wait until the next Holy Cross picnic and see what!

HOLD UP SOLVED IN 15 MIN.

Solving in 15 minutes a Hill district taxicab holdup during which there was a running gun battle covering many blocks, police early today picked up the trail of a New York clearing house lottery. Three prisoners arrested have admitted their part in the holdup, police say, and tipped off the location of a lottery ticket agency.

Meyer Schafer, 21, taxi driver of 124 Erin street, picked up three fares at Washington street and Fifth avenue at 1:30 o'clock this morning. At Our way the trio robbed him of $18 and fled. Schafer notified Patrolman F. E. Watt and together they started a cruise of the Hill district.

At Elm and Wylie avenue Schafer pointed out Tony Mangeno, 22, of 1200 Hazel street, as one of the holdup men. Then began a chase of 11 squares, during which the policeman fired several shots.

As Mangeno passed Engine House No. 3 in Webster avenue, the patrolman called on two firemen to stop the man. Mangeno, it is said, drew a revolver and backed the firemen away. A chase of a few more squares and Mangeno was arrested. At the police station he said his companions were Frank Kerone, 19, of 73 Elm street, and George Morgan, 18, of 1615 Fifth avenue. Both were arrested at their homes. When searched, in addition to a revolver, Mangeno was found to have a book of receipts for a clearing house lottery. He said he was selling them on a commission basis for a Hill district barber.

Cherokee Will Slated Against Kaw Charley

HOUSTON, Tex., June 23.—Say, I got a great new political scheme. Captain Hickman, captain of the Texas Rangers, wants me to run as vice president on the Democratic ticket, me being Cherokee Indian and Charley Curtis a Kaw Indian. Hickman's theory is that the Cherokees have always licked the Kaws, and that there is many more Cherokees than Kaws. Pretty sound reasoning.

WILL ROGERS

And besides, nobody knows How I stand on prohibition. Coolidge was President six years and nobody knew how he stood. Religion—I am a Holy Roller. Farm relief—I never voted for, against, or even read the Mary McHaughen bill. Vote for Rogers and scalp the Kaws.

Yours,

WILL.

TAKE OFF IN RAIN

Maj. Lutz's takeoff here was in the mist and rain. He first planned to attempt the flight without a stop, but the Navy Department ruled against such a venture. Maj. Lutz's flight, had it been completed, would have been the fifth made by the Marine Corps to Managua. Maj. Lutz recently won the Curtiss marine trophy for speed, making 157 miles per hour.

He was born in Illinois in 1881, and was appointed to the Marine Corps in 1905. His mother is recorded at the Navy Department as residing at San Diego, Cal. Lutz' home is in Boise, Idaho, but his widow lives in Washington.

Gregor. No one couple from the Steel Town seems any stronger than the other.

In the 13 days the marathon has been running here a total of $5,120 has been given the dancers in sprint money, to say nothing of the dresses the girl contestants have received. Last night a New York dressmaker presented each of the 13 girls on the floor with a new garment.

Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque expressed their sorrow yesterday when informed that Albert Bonach and Cora Dean had been disqualified in the Pittsburgh marathon now running. The Jacque girl was Bonach's first partner in a marathon and the couples recently tied in another dance endurance in Pittsburgh. The Jacque girl was suffering from an infected tooth last night, but she is all right this morning.

Just how long this endurance contest will last here is a question, one certainty, however, is that the world's record will be broken this afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the dancers will have danced 304 hours.

"Talking" Newsreel Latest Screen Idea; Neilan-Sweet Return Home From London

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright 1928 by ng Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 23.

IF THINGS keep on at the present rate, you'll soon be reading "extra" editions of your favorite paper from a motion picture screen. And not only will you "look over the news," but you'll hear it, too. For Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is about to launch its Movietone Newsreel, which will cover all topics of current interest just as a newspaper.

The news will be gathered, and the newsreel produced, by the William Randolph Hearst organization.

There were any number of movie celebs down at the station watching the train come in Thursday. Mickey Neilan met Blanche Sweet, just home from "deah ol' Lunnon." Ernest Torrence and his wife were awfully pleased to be home again. Director Henry King greeted Mrs. King, and a crowd of picture folks turned out to greet Betty Colfax, New York scribe.

We all got together at the station, and as it happened none of us was a "native son." And the sight of the choo-choos made everyone long to embark for the old home town, whether it was Paducah, Skeneateles, Sauk Center—or New York.

All the folks at Paramount are walking around with broad grins on their faces these days. Even the supervisors and other executives are chuckling to themselves. The reason is that the whole outfit has been sneaking out to the set where Clara Bow, Jimmy Hall and Jimmy Oakley are making "The Fleet's In." There's a dance hall sequence being filmed with some five hundred "gobs" doing their stuff with their "goil fren's." And, oh boy, how they step! Everyone's having a lot of fun. And that's the spirit that prevails when good pictures are made.

Incidentally, one of Paramount's bright young men clipped from somewhere a heading which read "The Human Dynamo," and pasted it on his office door. But another B. Y. M. glued another caption over it. The second one read: "The Day Dreamer—Will He Ever Wake Up?"

Alice White isn't so all-fired patriotic as I thought she was. Alice recently gave a hip-hip-hooray and announced she would wed Dick Grace, the aviator, on the Fourth of July. But now Alice says all bets are off, and Dick is up in the air again practicing up for an air circus to be staged in connection with "the Big Hop," in which Buck Jones will star.

By the way, around convention time—I mean movie sales conventions, not presidential—the stars are asked to autograph photos for the exhibitors. Alice White's greeting was, "You made me, big boy, and I sure do appreciate it." Which is true. The showmen demanded Alice's presence on the screen—and Alice is duly thankful.

Romance rumors, shattered, mended and new, include the final divorce of Louise Brooks from Director Eddie Sutherland, the steenth report of the reconciliation between Ken Harlan and Marie Prevost, and the fact that the "Cocoanut Grove" Orchestra played the "Wedding March" when Lois Moran and "Junior" Laemmle walked in the other evening.

"The Momart" was a mass of brilliant color today with all the girls dressed stunningly. Lilyan Tashman and Hedda Hooper, considered the best-dressed women here, looked charming. But my eye was taken by Billie Dove arrayed in a suit of fine black Kasha, with narrow side pleats covering the skirt, and a jacket with rounded collar and front. Light woolen coats and silk dresses are much in evidence, and while the coat is usually straight and slender, the dress often has a soft skirt fullness hanging irregularly below the coat.

"Skeets" Gallagher, Broadway's silver blonde, who merely tolerates Hollywood, looked mournfully at a new arrival, shook his head solemnly, and said: "Well, maybe you'll like it here." And his tone had just the inflection to make one wonder if there was a dirty dig hidden somewhere in his remark. "Skeets" says if he stays here much longer he'll get to look like Ned Sparkes, who is the original "Dead Pan Louis" of the movies.

First National is fighting the battle of Trafalgar all over again off the California coast. Some of the cannonading has been heard a distance of eight miles, and over 5,000 rounds of ammunition have been fired. Lord Nelson's gunners are all over six feet tall. Dynamite is electrically exploded aboard the ships to produce the effect of bulls-eyes by the cannoneers. The ships are towed to port each evening for repairs, 30 tailors mend the uniforms every night, and I suppose the men are plastered up, too. I don't mean "plastered" the way you think, either.

PUZZLE FOR STAR :-: BRIAN BOOKED :-: ANOTHER PROBLEM

Colleen Moore finds it hard to tell which is Gemrose Yakey and which is Cherrie Yakey. They are twins, aged 18 years, just out of high school, and never had been inside of a studio until they were signed to appear in a picture with Miss Moore.

Brian McDonald, Pittsburgh tenor, will go to New York to begin preparations for appearance in a lead role with Earl Carroll's "Vanities," in which he had a small part last season.

"Bozo," the $20,000 movie goose, was demanded in payment of a debt of $220, for which the claimant had a judgment, but when the goose began kissing its owner Judge Westover scratched his head a moment and decided for some other way of collecting.

ETNA RAID LAID TO POLITICS

Constable Peter Schmidt of the Second ward, Etna, who caused the prohibition enforcement agents to raid several Etna places recently, "is not in court with clean hands," so it is alleged in an answer filed in Common Pleas Court.

Joseph Stora, Rudolph Modrovich and Antonia Modrovich make the averments and deny that their place is used or maintained as a place where liquor is sold. The same allegations also are made in the case of John Milcic and Mary Cilcic who through their counsel, Mayer Sniderman deny that intoxicating liquors were sold on the premises. They claim the proceedings against them were instituted because of political differences. They also assert there are numerous places and stores in Etna where liquor has been sold and possessed since the institution of the proceedings and hearing in the case.

STRIPS TO COOL OFF, SOUGHT AS SUICIDE

Returning to shore, Ramage found a crowd on the bank and men in skiffs dragging the river.

WIFE'S AFFECTION VALUED AT $25,000

WHEELING, W. Va., June 23.—(AP.)—Joseph R. Lantz, an oil company official, has filed suit in Ohio county court for $25,000 against Harry Lamotte, contractor, charging alienation of the affections of his wife, Edith. Ernie Taylor of Duquesne was named as the author of some of the notes of love to Mrs. Bearinger. Following are excerpts from one of them which was introduced with: "My Dearest Little Sweetheart," and closed with, "Your Loving Ernie, bye bye sweetheart," and a dozen X marks.

"How are you darling? Are you divorced yet, ha, ha! Do you still like me as much as ever, honey? Yea, gee, that's fine! . . . There's a gas station Ernie! Gee, those words will follow one always. How nice you would say that, ha, ha. . . . Please don't show this letter to Sarah Larue, dear, as she may get sore at me, ha, ha. Gee, I can't say I am a saint or angel but that's one girl I can't see."

OLD FRIEND AIDS SICK BABIES

"Lady Henrietta," she of the musical name, has today made her annual subscription to The Sun-Tele Milk and Ice Fund. For years this same anonymous donor has remembered the babies whom the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Milk and Ice Association has under its care, and each year the appearance of her name on the list is like the sight of a familiar and most welcome face at one's door. Perhaps "Lady Henrietta" knows how sorely the association needs funds this season. Perhaps she knows the extent of the work done by the organization and how far into the years it reaches because of the thoroughness with which it is done.

It may even be that she has attended the semi-weekly clinics in the association headquarters in the Lyceum Building, where these poor, groping mothers bring their tiny, wailing babies to be weighed, examined, charted and prescribed for. Wailing babies, did we say? Not after the first few weeks, for then the little mites begin to take on weight, and with the added ounces come smiles and coos in place of the howls of discomfort and pain which had been theirs before they were properly nourished and cared for.

Previously reported	$184 48

NORTH SIDE BOY DROWNS

An hour after Edward Septak, 8, of 2016 Beaver avenue ran merrily out of his home last evening to play, his body was found in the Ohio river, near Nixon street. His parents were unable to explain how he had fallen into the river, the supposition being that he lost his footing while playing at the river bank with other boys.

The boy, a third grade pupil of the Manchester school leaves his father, Michael Septek; his mother, Mrs. Mary Septek; three sisters, Ethel, Margaret and Helen Septek.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Marriage of Margaret Perkins to John Speer Laughlin Brings Ex-Pittsburgh Girl Back Here

NEXT winter our local society will have in its midst again one of its own daughters, who has lived much of the time in New York. I mean, of course, Margaret Perkins, who is now Mrs. John Speer Laughlin. Margaret is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Curtis Perkins, and you will remember that she made her debut here about four years ago. She has numbers of friends and relatives here who will be glad to have her live in Pittsburgh permanently.

Margaret was married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock to Mr. Laughlin, who is a son of the junior George M. Laughlins, of Woodland road, the ceremony being performed in the picturesque Church of St. Andrew-on-the-Dunes, at Southampton, where the Perkins family has its summer home. Dean Percy G. Kammerer, of Trinity Cathedral, was the officiant, and after the service there was a small reception at "Clyden," the Perkins home.

The bride was given away by her father, and she wore cream moire, made with a deep yoke of old Flemish lace and long, tight sleeves finished with the lace. Her full skirt fell into a peacock train and her tulle veil was held with a bandeau of pearls and orange blossoms. Instead of the usual bouquet, Margaret carried an ivory prayer book from which fell a spray of white orchids.

The girls of the bridal party all wore charming frocks of aquamarine blue chiffon, made with full ruffled skirts with uneven hemlines, and their picture hats were of honey-colored braid. They carried blue and yellow garden flowers. Margaret's cousin, Martha S. Chalfant, of Ridge avenue, was her maid of honor, and the bridesmaids included another cousin, Retta Johnston, of Lexington, Ky.; Clodagh McCune, also a Pittsburgh girl; Beatrice Patterson, of Philadelphia, and Phyllis Thompson, of New York and Southampton.

Mr. Laughlin had John H. P. Gould, of New Haven, for his best man and the ushers included F. Curtis Perkins, Jr., George M. Laughlin III, William K. Laughlin, Alexander L. Robinson, Erl C. B. Gould, J. Verner Scaife, Jr., and John H. Ricketson III, all of this city; Warren M. Wells, of Stratford, Pa.; Francis Fife Symington, of Baltimore, and Carter B. Carnegie, of Cumberland Island, Ga.

The young Laughlins are sailing to spend several months abroad, and when they get back they expect to stay for a short time in New Haven. Later, though, they will come here to live.

AN interesting engagement just announced in Sewickley is that of Mary Lapsley Caughey, daughter of Edward Grant Caughey of Pine road, Edgeworth, and Dr. George Martin Guest of Cincinnati. Mary, you know, is a Vassar girl, and she also studied at Bryn Mawr and the University of Brussels. Dr. Guest is a graduate of the Cincinnati Medical School. He studied, too, at both Brussels and Vienna, and last year he was an instructor in the Harvard Medical College.

She is widely known abroad as a concert violinist. Mr. Moyer is a University of Pittsburgh man, and also attended Yale, the Sorbonne and the Alliance Francaise in Paris. NEWSPAPER FILM IN STRONG BILL

Liberty Theater patrons are being treated to special entertainment this week in the alliance of George Bancroft in "The Drag Net" and "The Making of a Newspaper," a two-reel news feature, detailing the production of the modern newspaper.

"The Drag Net" portrays a story of love, intrigue, and battle in the underworld while "The Making of a Newspaper" takes the patrons along with the reporter gathering facts on a "story" and follows it through to the newsboys on the street.

On the stage Eddie Cooke and the Shaw Sisters, lately from Ziegfeld's Follies, add the final touch to an almost perfect program with dancing and melody.

SHERADEN CLUB ENDS YEAR WITH LUNCHEON

IT was an unusually pretty luncheon and an exceptionally good program that the Woman's Club of Sheraden gave yesterday to close its season. The women met in the Sheraden Presbyterian Church, the Ladies' Aid Society of which cooked and served the luncheon and decorated the Sunday school room in honor of the occasion. Field daisies, bushels of them, it seemed, were on all the tables, the officers' table having a huge bowl of the club emblems surrounded with a wreath of the flowers intertwined with smilax. Syringa branches covered the wall lights, while the chandeliers and windows were draped with yellow and huge bouquets of peonies added another note of color.

Mrs. F. W. Graham presented the program including repetition of the tableaux which had featured the "Pioneer Woman" program given during the winter. In this Mrs. C. M. McKee, Mrs. Robert McMillan, Mrs. G. K. Cowan and little Ellen Faull, under the direction of Mrs. Stephen Faull, represented the Puritan mother, the Virginia bride and the pioneer woman of the Western frontier and her child, the last two making a striking picture posed as one of the statues which had competed in the national pioneer woman contest. Mrs. T. C. Pitzer and Miss Hazel Pitzer contributed piano duets and Mrs. Caroline Himelblau, with Mrs. Grace Blenko Martin at the piano, offered another charming feature—contralto solos, one group of which were given in Spanish costume. Mrs. W. B. Dolan, the retiring president, and her successor, Mrs. Bruce Cobaugh, were presented with bouquets of peonies.

The club authorized Mrs. Alfred Ackenheil and her educational committee to proceed during the summer with plans for increasing the scholastic fund, of which they hope ultimately to make an endowed fund.

JUBILEE MANAGER, SUN-TELEGRAPH, PITTSBURGH, PA.

I would like to attend The Sun-Telegraph Boys' and Girls' Jubilee July 3.

My folks are regular readers of The Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh's greatest newspaper.

Please mail a ticket with the 14 coupons—good for admission to 12 amusement attractions and for the "Cream of the Valley" French Vanilla Ice Cream Bar, also the balloon.

5,000 JUBILEE TICKETS MAILED

Have you received your Sun-Tele Jubilee ticket?

Five thousand pasteboards have been mailed to the lucky first 5,000 boys and girls who sent in their coupons and all should have the tickets by this time. Several thousand more will be placed in the mail today. Thousands more coupons are pouring in and the tickets are being sent out as rapidly as the envelopes can be addressed.

With their tickets in hand The Sun-Tele's young friends begin to realize something of the big time they are bound to have at the great outing at National Amusement Park above Aspinwall, Tuesday, July 3. There is no doubt now that this will be the greatest boys' and girls' picnic ever held anywhere near Pittsburgh, and something will be provided for the entertainment of the visitors every hour of the day and evening.

The Jubilee Manager has received hundreds of pleasant letters from his little friends who have sent in their coupons. He would like to answer each letter personally, but the fact is that he is so busy preparing for the Jubilee that he has no time to do anything else. However, he does find time to read every letter and the writers of those letters may be pleased to know that they are doing much toward enthusing him and in making his work pleasant. He is keeping the letters and hopes some day to answer them in a way to surprise the boys and girls who are speaking a good word to him now when he has so much work to do.

He just wants to remind you that one of your first gifts at the park will be a French vanilla bar, "the Cream of the Valley," and, oh, yes, you'll get a balloon for the whole day's sport.

More about the Jubilee in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Sage Advice for Restless Girls From Fay King

By FAY KING

SHE'S going to run away from home. She's tired of being treated like a child!

They sit up for her when she stays out late. They want to know where she has been, and with whom.

They disapprove of her friends who keep late hours and go to questionable places.

She has confided in some of her new friends. They are so sympathetic and heartily agree with her. Parents are so stupid and narrow-minded.

But why shouldn't these new friends agree with her It's so much easier than arguing. And after all they don't really care what she does!

Why should they? They haven't known her very long. They didn't watch her grow up. They didn't guide her first faltering little steps. They haven't any interest in her future,

Sure she is welcome among them while she can dance and laugh and lend gaiety to the gathering. But not one of them would pass up a party on her account if she were ill and unhappy.

Yes! The folks at home do treat her like a child!

And if she leaves home many is the time she will wish with all her heart that she could be treated like a child again by those who love her best.

The world won't!

The Art of Being Good Company

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"SHE'S good company!" These three words suggest a pleasant personality, one containing the elements of popularity.

"She's a dear!" is usually the verdict about the girl who is good company. "She can always think of something to talk about—makes everyone have a good time!"

Ever so many girls write me asking for the secret of popularity. Here's one great secret—be good company. And the way to be good company for others is to begin by being good company for yourself. If you and yourself get along beautifully, comfortably, happily together, the chances are you also get along with other folks.

There's Cozette, for instance. Cozette always looks for the amusing, funny side of things and, naturally, she finds it. As a result, there is laughter in the air wherever she goes. And you know, yourself, nothing relieves tension in the family circle or elsewhere like a good laugh. If there were no one at home but Cozette and her cat, I am sure she would make the cat laugh. As it is, he purrs most of the time in appreciation of the friendly, pleasant atmosphere in which he finds himself.

BUT Cozette is never alone at home, long enough to be lonesome. People who have something positive, radiant to add to the general good times, are wanted everywhere. Cozette's gift of cheerful, easy, casual conversation and scintillating good humor makes her the kind of girl that both other girls and men like, and she is so much sought after that her problem is to find time to be alone.

Everyone can cultivate this gift of being good company. Do not take the light things of life too solemnly. Watch your own thoughts, for they determine whether you are good company for yourself and others. If you find yourself constantly feeling sorry for yourself, lookout! You probably are the whining type, and that is fatal to popularity.

Do you find fault, criticize and condemn your acquaintances when you are thinking things over? It's not fair, you know, for none of us [illegible]ge any of the others fairly, [illegible]one of us know all the cir[illegible]nces and deep, hidden mo[illegible]nd causes back of what we disapprove. If you find yourself criticizing and hating others, reverse your thought process and turn the searchlight of your thoughts on your own personality.

Think of ways of improving yourself, your manners, your appearance, your kindly consideration of others. When you are in a battling, fault-finding mood, battle with yourself—scold yourself [illegible]r own faults and resolve [illegible]ourself of them. After all, [illegible]strictly minding your own [illegible]s, which is an attribute of charm.

ONE of my correspondents, H. B. S., touches on this question from the masculine point of view.

"I get most of my thrills on the diamond, gridiron, ice or track," he writes, "and enjoy a little swimming. It was at one time a question as to whether I would go out to the corner and hang out with the gang. But at the time I read one of your articles, Don't depend on the gang—learn to enjoy your own company. It struck home!

"Of course there are bad good people and good bad people. I've learned that much. Thinking will explain what I mean.

"But being able to enjoy my own company has enabled me to avoid many rides in misappropriated automobiles, to—I don't know what. Being alone gave me time to balance things in my mind and think things out, until, finally, I met Her, which may not mean a thing to anyone else, but means a gold mine to me! I hope this hasn't sounded all bunk!"

Indeed, your letter is not "bunk," H. B. S. It is too earnest, sincere and true for that.

H. B. S., Cozette and countless others, fortunately for this old world, have learned the outward graces of life that make for charm, by keeping on the best of terms with themselves.

"I said to myself,"—you have heard the phrase. See that you say honest, cheery things to yourself and that "yourself" answers in kind. Keep the windows of your mind opened wide to the sunlight and fresh air of active good-will, eager interest in the fine interests of the world, zest for life. Then, like H. B. S., you will recognize real romance when you find it, and when you meet The Man, he will find in you a "gold mine" of cheery charm and comradeship and loyal, unswerving affection.

LOVE'S CHOICE

There's More Sparkle in a Baby's Eyes Than in All the Wine in the World

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

©1928 by Ivy's Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved

THE wine of life is the most intoxicating beverage that has ever been known. And those who imbibe of it too freely, mistaking its bubbles and sparkle for all the best that is granted to mortals, soon tire of its glamour.

Take, for instance, the girl who stands poised on expectant toe, lovely and so young in her innocence and experience. She looks down the broad pathway of the life that is stretched before her, and sees all the gayety and good times and carefree joyousness of which she has dreamed and wants immediately to plunge headlong into the mad whirl. But she doesn't see all the heartaches and tragedy that lie buried underneath the painted and gilded surface. All she sees are the rainbow colored bubbles and the sparkle and clear headiness of the brimming wine cup which is life. And away she goes!

But when Love comes to her and points out to her all the pitfalls and yawning chasms that stretch beneath her dainty feet—then is when she stops suddenly in her mad rush after Pleasure and contemplates which of the two paths that open before her is the right one to take.

And invariably Love points out the right one. It may seem hard and thorny and stony in comparison to the rose strewn path down which she has so daintily been dancing, but—who wouldn't prefer the sparkle of a baby's eyes to the most rare wine in the world? Can anything compare to the happiness which comes from a tiny golden head nestling close to one's heart?

This is Love's Choice and Love is always right. Sometimes the little regrets come stealing through the contentment, but this is only that one may appreciate the real Love.

So when Love's Choice is offered to you, take it, for in this way alone does Happiness lie.

Important Details For Charm

Maria Jeritza.

IT is surprising that so many women devote their entire efforts for personal beauty to their complexion and hair, with possibly spasmodic attention to a reducing diet.

Yet the small, seemingly insignificant details of grooming and beauty count most in making up an impression of loveliness and charm. Wrists that are rough and wrinkled, run-down heels on her shoes, slightly soiled stockings with crooked seams, a handkerchief not fresh as it should be—any or all of these small offenses against neatness and daintiness may utterly ruin a woman's appearance and even—who knows?—nip a budding romance. For men are very critical about such details.

SO little attention and expense are needed to insure freshness and daintiness. Do you run your finger along the seams of your stockings when you put them on, to make sure they are straight? A broad garter girdle with back and front stocking clasps should hold your hosiery in place firmly and prevent wrinkles about the ankles and instep.

Fifty cents or a trifle more will replace run-over heels on your shoes with trim, neat heels, and this precaution may save you from strained arches and defective feet.

How much time does it take to wash out 14 handkerchiefs once a week, iron them and lay them away in a case scented with lavender or your favorite sachet? Laundry also is inexpensive. Yet the sight of a soiled handkerchief may give others a lastingly unfavorable impression of your personality.

SEVERAL times a day—20 if need be—take one instant to smooth down ruffled locks with your pocket comb or brush.

When you wash your hands, do not forget to roll up your cuffs and include your wrists in the scrub, so that there will not be a dark rim or high-water mark show where your cleanliness leaves off. Next, a bath with a good hand lotion, rubbing it in with the other hand exactly as you would rub a new glove over your wrists.

Elbows that are calloused and rough will spoil the impression created by the loveliest evening gown. Remember, your arms are only as pretty as your elbows. If your elbows are very rough, scrub them gently, slowly, with a cake of pumice stone that has been dipped in warm water.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY HUSBANDS ARE FAITHFUL

SAY not unto me, oh Daughter, that ALL Good Husbands are dead husbands.

For, verily, verily, Babylon aboundeth in faithful husbands, and I have seen them with mine own eyes.

Now, behold, when five of these were gathered together, I sought them out and questioned them, saying, "Wherefore are ye models of devotion in a world full of flirts and steppers? Why are ye loyal to the wives of your bosom in the face of all temptations?"

HELEN ROWLAND

And, lo, the first husband spake up, saying:

"Behold, I am wedded to the most beautiful and enchanting of women; and all the others are as dust and also-rans in mine eyes. Yea, I am faithful to the woman of my heart, even because I LOVE her!"

* * *

And the second husband made reply, saying:

"I am married to the fairest and most honorable of women. And so long as she playeth square with me, I shall play fair with her. Verily, my conscience holdeth me in the straight and narrow way."

And the third husband responded, saying:

* * *

"Go to. I am wedded to a woman who cannot be fooled. Yea, she hath by Number! I DARE not deceive her; for she would find me out, and my name would be blazoned on the front page, and it would be 'Dennis!' Therefore are my feet held to the dotted line by cold fear!"

And the fourth husband answered, saying:

"Lo, I am wedded to a spender, who keepeth me humping to satisfy her wants and to supply her with glad rags and new motor cars and trips to Paris. Alas, I am too busy all day and too weary at eve to find time or thoughts for any other woman! Yea, it is hard labor that keepeth me safe from the wiles of sirens and gold-diggers!"

* * *

But the fifth husband spake, saying:

* * *

"Verily, verily, I love my wife—but even more do I love my Peace of Mind! And serenity and quiet within the house are definitely to be preferred to variety, with clashing and discord. For no flirtation and no damsel are worth a life of torment and battle and family rows."

* * *

Behold, my Daughter, these are the Five Good Reasons why men cleave unto their wives and follow not in the ways of fools and steppers—even love, conscience, fear, hard labor and love of peace! And the greatest of these is Love of Peace!

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Lonesome

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am coming to you for advice. I have been reading your column all winter and I think it is fine. I have never been able to have any advice from anyone, and it seems awfully hard for a girl to paddle her own canoe alone. I have been looking out for myself for five years. My father wouldn't allow me to go to school, and it wasn't because he couldn't afford it, either, for I know he could. He seems to hate me. I never was loved by either of my parents until they found I could make my own living. But my problem is: My sister was sick and I went to help her out. She lived in Wisconsin. There I met a young man. He is about two years older than myself. He is a very clean fellow. But when he was 19 his friends with whom he went to school wanted him to join them. He went on just one wild party and was very ill. That was before he started to go with me. He came to see me three times, wanted me to go with him, but I refused. Then he'd stay at my sister's home and we would have good times. He never went on any wild parties after that. We went steady for over a year. He'd save his money so we could get married. Once he made believe he was angry at me, to see if I cared for him. I knew it so I went with another friend. Then he came right back. Then I knew he loved me. Then one night we were to a party. I was very popular that night, and there being a crowd, we didn't see each other much. But every chance I'd try and be with him. Then when we were to go home he said if I wanted to I could go home with a friend of mine, and I said "no." The party was about half a mile from my home. Then he went with me. He came three or four times a week in any kind of weather. I was so happy. We both loved each other. Then one night he asked me about a new car. I told him I liked a certain kind, and that was the kind he got. One night we went to a party and everything was lovely. Then there was a fellow who didn't want me fellow to go with me. My friend drank something and was ashamed to see me then. So he went home and told a friend to see I got home safely. The following week I was to a party and so was he. He was ashamed of himself and everyone noticed it. Yet we didn't speak. Then I went to another town to work. I was there two months. Then my sister was going east and I came with her. He came up to see me the night before I left and cried for me to forgive him. He loved me more than ever. He told me everything. But at this town where I worked a man about twice my age said he was crazy over me. I was so lonesome for Fred that I would go with him. He was married before and has two children. I don't like him, and forgot him easy. But Fred I'll never forget. But since I've been east he has never written to me. But I hear from his sister, and he always reads my letters and says he still loves me. Would it be all right for me to go back to Wisconsin this summer. I don't want to get married yet, but I can't have a good time like I did when I was with him. Don't you think he still loves me and will be good, or do you think he will start to drink again if I go back, just to torment me? Please give me some motherly advice. The world seems so blue and lonesome.

LONESOME.

If your sister wants you to come back to Wisconsin this summer why don't you do it? Perhaps this boy has learned a lesson by this time and won't drink any more.

Worried and Blue

DEAR MISS GALE:

I'm coming to you for help, please, Miss Gale. I am a girl 19 years old. There's a fellow 28 years old that is deeply in love with me. I am not quite sure of his love. Sometimes I like him more than other times. Well, the question is he is getting a divorce from his wife and it will be granted in a few months. I hardly ever cared for a divorced man, but the way he gives me things I hate to tell him I don't care for him. Please, Miss Gale, help me. Should I give him up or still go with him or what? My parents don't know I go out with him. Do you think it best to forget him or what and don't you think he is too old for me? Of course I like him, Miss Gale, please help me. I'll take your advice. Wishing you all kinds of happiness. Oh, yes, do you think I would live happy with this man if I should ever marry him? Best of luck and may I write again?

WORRIED AND BLUE.

You are certainly not in love with this man and since he is not free, anyway, if I were you I should give him up. It is not a pleasant thing you are doing, keeping his friendship for the sake of his gifts.

Blue Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your wonderful advice and am coming for some myself. I am a girl of 16 years of age and I am in love with a young man, aged 22. He loves me, but his people hate me, and he is not allowed to go with me, but I love him so I can't give him up. His people try to make me believe he goes with some one else, but I know it is not true. Please don't tell me to forget him, for I can't. I do not see much of him now. I think he doesn't care for me like he used to. Tell me how I can win his love again. I am very lonesome and blue. I just can't stop thinking of him. His people are so mean with him. They try to tell him what to do. I hope you can give me good advice. He has promised to marry me. Do you think I should go through with it?

BLUE EYES.

If this man is so easily swayed by his relatives, then he doesn't really love you, my dear. Try to forget him. You are much too young to be thinking you are in love anyway, and you will soon be happy again.

Broken-Hearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young girl in my teens and would like some advice from you. I have never written to you before, but I never miss reading the Lovelorn.

I am in love with a certain fellow who is two years my senior. Now Miss Gale this fellow has been going with me for a while, but he has dropped me because I don't agree on the kissing and petting questions. I have called him up and he talked harshly over the phone and used vulgar language. Miss Gale, do you think this fellow likes me if he talks vulgar to me.

I am considered good looking and I'm nice and plump, but not fat. Please, Miss Gale, give me advice.

BROKENHEARTED.

My dear, a man who would talk vulgarly to you is not worth worrying about, so try to forget him. You were quite right in refusing to permit him to kiss you.

BOY BANDIT LOOTS TRAIN, GETS $50,000

THE CONSTANT FLAME

A Fair Maid Meets Love In Strange Surroundings

by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Micky Wickert's Wife Causes a Disturbance At the Yacht Club

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Emily Day and Kitten are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her and tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Her father dies and Rossiter offers help, which her mother declines. Avis Rossiter's father threatens to disinherit her unless she changes her ways. Great preparations are being made for Avis Rossiter's marriage. Kingdon Coles invites Emily to go to the city to a show. Emily visits the newspaper plant while King writes his review of the play. Her mother reminds her she is as good as promised to Marty. Emily does over the house and hears Kent is coming home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BUT one thing Anne had said didn't make her feel merry. Kent would come in a week or so. He would come here to Lyall—live in this same town where she lived. Perhaps she'd see him this time; perhaps he'd remember her and speak.

She hurried home that evening and got out the Japanese box. One by one she went over the old clippings, the rotogravures, the picture post-cards. She held each long, loving it, putting it down regretfully.

And after she had placed the box away a whimsical impulse made her reach the top of her little desk, pick up a crystal glass standing there, and turn it down.

She'd had an engagement with Coles that evening; they were to have the postponed drive and dinner at an inn up Storm King road. But she telephoned him and put arrangements over to the next night.

Late in the evening she tried to get Kitten to go for a walk, but Kitten was sullen. So Emily threw a scarf over her shoulders and started out alone.

She went down Highmount, intending to stroll a little way on the River road. But in the deep shadow half down the hill she found Stella.

"That you, Em? Well—"

"For heaven's sake! What is it, Stell?"

Stella began to cry. "He said he'd come tonight. I saw him today on the street—ran after him and made him promise. And I've waited more than an hour."

"Oh, my dear! But he might have mistaken the place."

Stella caught at that, began to hurry forward. "You think so? Never thought of it—of course. Telephone him. You'll come with me, Em—"

Terrible to love in such a way! "I must never love so—a ghastly thing to be hurt—" Emily kept thinking this as they went on and found a telephone.

After a long time Stella turned from the instrument, her face gray. "He's gone down to New York," she said. "This afternoon—must have left right after I saw him. He didn't intend to come, didn't intend to see me—"

She followed Emily home, still and limp, like one whose soul has died.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

LYALL rocked the next morning to a new Nicky Wickert scandal.

The Star gave it little space—a mere item without names under the heading, "Disturbance at Yacht Club."

But the story spread in the small town manner, over back fences, luncheon tables, party telephone lines and street corners.

By noon everybody knew that Mrs. Bianca Wickert had walked into a private room at the club the evening before and had pointed a little, pearl-handled revolver at her husband. He was dining with a young and charming matron with whom he had no right to dine.

Mrs. Bianca Wickert was beautiful and hot-blooded; once she had been a dancer and in her native Madrid wives who had been dancers did not see their husbands debonairely deserting them for newer fancies without doing something about it.

Of course, Nicky never had been a model of faithfulness. He was built on the general scheme of the butterfly, flitting here and there whenever a flower, for a moment, seemed brightest.

In his bachelorhood he had flitted to Seville, where he was astonished to learn that love-making was likely to be taken seriously, especially by brothers and fathers. In consequence he came home married.

After that his style was shackled by the fact that when he began to flit Bianca also flitted, slightly in his rear and carrying whatever weapon came easily to hand.

Nicky's derelictions only annoyed her at first and she contented herself with throwing dishes and other such missiles at him and his feminine guests.

Later, when she began to grow really irritated, she took to wielding a slender knife—she had a way of carrying this in her garter whence it could be snatched without lost effort.

Once she used the knife in such a telling manner that a certain fashionable country club was strewn with most of a shredded tuxedo mixed with odds and ends of pink chiffon. Nicky's preference at this time being a debutante addicted to pink chiffon.

The night of the Yacht Club episode, however, Bianca lost her temper. And had not one of her husband's friends seen her undulating up the staircase, black eyes burning in a white face, no knowing what might have happened.

As it was he followed, and when the woman flashed out the lethal toy he knocked it from her hand.

She turned on him like a fury, screaming and scratching. But the steward came charging with a pair of huskies and hurried her out the back way.

Still everybody heard her shriek, "I'll do it! But wait and we shall see!"

It was characteristic of Nicky that he turned to the charming matron with no more show of emotion than an eye-brow slightly raised and inquired if she would have red wine or white.

But the matron stared in a curious way and disappeared. It always was so with him; something disagreeable bobbing up just when things had started to go smoothly.

This is the story Emily heard shortly after she had unlocked the shop door and put the place to rights. Various persons stopped in with it, each adding something new.

She had met Nicky once when she dined with Frances at the Yacht Club; he had been sitting alone and he got up and came toward them slowly, stopping by her chair.

She recalled clearly the long, sensitive hand he rested on the edge of the table, the dark face and the eyes with depths in them. The eyes had rested on her a long moment, piercing through her some way; she had felt suddenly warm, wrapped in a new, mysterious charm.

But Frances hadn't been pleased. Emily thought her almost rude in the brusque way she said, "Run along now, Nicky; we're busy."

He bowed very low with something of Coles' foreign manner and went. But he glanced back.

"Ought to be exterminated in the interest of public decency!" Frances burst out.

"I thought him nice, dear."

CANADA TO MEXICO HOP ON

International News Service.

WALKERVILLE, Ont., June 23.—Joaquim Pacheco, Mexican businessman, and Fritz Vieler, former German war ace and now proprietor of a flying school in Mexico City, hopped off today at 7:34 on a nonstop flight to Mexico City.

The fliers are driving a Stinson-Detroiter plane. The plane carried 410 gallons of gas, enough for the 30 to 35 hours of sustained flying to the Mexican capital.

Vieler was a German aviator in the World War and then went to Mexico City, where he is a leader in aviation circles. The object of the flight is to stimulate interest in commercial aviation in Mexico.

The fliers headed for Dayton, O. Plans to fly by way of Washington were abandoned when the weather bureau reported storms over Pennsylvania.

FOUR MORE GIVE RUM BONDS

Four of the 167 men indicted in the Federal grand jury liquor probe yesterday furnished bonds before the United States commissioner, pending trial, and another, Frank Russo, was committed to jail when he failed to give the necessary bond. This leaves 35 of the indicted men unaccounted for, as the United States deputy marshals are having difficulty in locating many because of no definite addresses.

Those giving bonds were James McNally, Jr., Kirkbride street; Joseph Jeffries, a former resident of this city, now living in Barnesville, O.; Galogero Laverde, Heidelberg; Buster Moffitt, Brewery street, and Joseph Courtney, Bryn Mawr avenue.

BOY ROBS TRAIN OF $50,000

International News Service.

BLISSFIELD, Mich., June 23.—A lone bandit who held up a New York Central passenger train here shortly before midnight, escaping with $50,000 in cash, was being sought by authorities of Blissfield and nearby towns today.

The train was en route from Chicago to Buffalo, having left Chicago at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The bandit is believed to have boarded the train at Adrian, Mich. He entered the express car and leveled a revolver at the messenger in charge. The latter was bound and gagged and hurled from the train when it slowed down for the Blissfield station.

The bandit, after seizing a pouch containing $50,000 in currency, leaped from the train on the other side of the track and escaped in the darkness. It is believed he fled to an automobile parked near the station and headed toward Detroit.

The train pulled into the station on time—11:13 p. m. The first intimation of the daring robbery came when several persons on the platform were horrified at the sight of a man's body hurled from the express car into their midst.

The messenger appeared to be uninjured and was quickly revived. But in the meantime the bandit had made good his escape from the other side of the train.

Adrian, where, according to the messenger, the bandit boarded the train, is 15 miles northwest of here. The messenger said the man "got the drop" on him as soon as he entered the express car. He described the bandit as "little more than a boy, well dressed in a blue suit, tan shoes and a light felt hat."

STEUBENVILLE SWIMMER, BOY AGED 9, DROWNS

JUDGES complain that juries thwart justice by bad verdicts. But even Sam Gardner, the prosecutor, and his able staff found no fault with the jury that freed a defendant who was accused of assault and battery. It appears, from the testimony, that the defendant attacked a man. There was proof of that. There were, however, extenuating circumstances. The defendant related he was going home one evening carrying a scythe in one hand and a huge watermelon under his other arm. Thus accoutred, the defendant was asked by the plaintiff if he had a match.

Only recently a jury was out for an awful long time on a murder case. A reporter called up one night to ask Roy Clunk, who handled the case for the commonwealth, if he had put the jury to bed for the night. "I don't put them to bed," said Mr. Clunk. "I simply put them to sleep."

JOE REICH, the barrister, is telling of a traffic policeman who would not be fooled. Mr. Reich parked his car in a dubious spot. He noted the car ahead already had been tagged for illegal parking. So Mr. Reich blandly walked to the tagged car and removed the tag and fastened it onto his machine. But some hours later when he returned to his car he found two tags on his steering wheel with this notation: "Since you seem to be wild about collecting these tags I thought I'd give you two instead of one. Cordially yours, The Traffic Cop."

Traffic anywhere is no more intricate than at the north end of the fine Liberty Tunnels. There is a traffic circle, part of which is one way and part of which is the other way, if you know what we mean. The evening rush hours present a swirl that must make the newcomer to that section dizzy. Traffic was well blocked the other evening by a motorist who had the misfortune to lose his gas tank. It just did a Humpty-Dumpty. What do you do when your gas tank falls off?

A LETTER from John Arnold Heydler, president of the National League, invites this department to an informal dinner Mr. Heydler is going to give the sports writers on June 23, the occasion being a celebration of Paul Waner Day in Pittsburgh. Paul Waner is not only the best hitter that has come up to the big leagues in many a day, but he is one of the most original bridge players that ever made a mistake. It is a delightful bit of Pirate history that Paul, considerably agitated with a good hand one evening, so forgot himself that after his partner had bid and the next man had passed, Warner, in great excitement, shouted: "I'll double you."

Paul Waner is not the only Pirate to have a "day" this season. Pie Traynor is also to be honored by his Pittsburgh friends some day early in July, when he will be tendered a banquet. Mr. Traynor, as you know, is a gentleman and a star ball player, and combines the best features of each. Women are to be allowed to attend the Traynor banquet. They will be interested to know that here is a bachelor who makes between $12,000 and $15,000 a year, with a fetching New England accent, with a dandy sense of humor, and in habits as clean as the well-known hound's tooth.

PITTSBURGH baseball fans, and even those who are not baseball fans have an admiration for Pie. The banquet, we venture, will be so crowded that it will be more difficult than ever to cut the chicken and at the same time avoid shooting the adjacent peas into the lap of the man sitting next to you.

* * *

In honoring ball players Pittsburgh made one very large mistake. In all the years he served here, Max Carey never was tendered a testimonial of a substantial nature, and in spite of the fact that there were many who disagreed with him in a controversy that brought his dismissal, there never was anyone who ever doubted his sterling qualities as a man and a player.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

Bob at Last Convinces Verna His Story of The Idols Is True

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. After many adventures Bob and Verna Lyle are both prisoners at Richardson's plantation. The Malay whom Bob had rescued plans Verna's and Bob's escape. Bob, still bound, is carried to safety by the Malay. Bob plans to leave Verna with friends in Kalawa. Bob is determined to find the Idol and starts a search. Bob finds one Idol and discovers it holds a message in cypher.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HER eyes still held intently on his face. "Do you mean to say that you did not know what was in that idol, or how to open it, or what its secret was?" she asked in a low, quick way.

"Of course not!" he answered, and then with a mirth-like little smile: "And I don't know now what it means, I wish I did!"

"I have been watching your face," she said almost under her breath, "and unless you are telling the truth you are a better actor than I give you credit for. This is the first thing you have ever said to me that I believe."

"By Jove!" he exclaimed eagerly, "You mean that? Well, that's a lot! Look here! Can't we go ahead a bit on that basis?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"It changes nothing," she said dully.

"Oh, yes, it does!" he countered quickly. "It's at least a bit of an opening wedge, and I'm going to make the most of it. I said to you that night in your cabin on the Monotah that if your brother had told you anything about the idol you must know I was not the man he was after, and your answer was that you knew me to be Black Bob Kingsley, who had been tried for another murder in Sarawak. But you did not say what your brother had told you. I think I'm entitled to the benefit of the doubt there in case he said nothing. I'd like to know how you recognized me from the first—for it was from the first, when we met in the Monotah's saloon just after I had come aboard at Tahola that I felt sure you knew I was not the 'Mr. Moore' I pretended to be."

"My brother's duties took him to a great many places, and quite frequently I used to accompany him on his trips," she said indifferently. "We were in Sarawak at the time of your trial. I saw you there—once—on the street."

"Once?" he echoed incredulously.

"Once," she repeated tersely.

"And you remembered me—even with 'Mr. Moore's' sun-glasses and sore eyes! That is almost a compliment, isn't it?"

"Your notoriety made you a striking figure, if that is what you mean!" she flung back at him.

"I'm sorry I invited that," he said with a wry grimace. "But your brother, then? That is what I cannot understand. You were days together on the ship; you knew he was in disguise, and presumably knew both his purpose and the story of the idols, since at the end he turned over to you the one he had got hold of. How is it possible, in view of this, or logical in any way, that you should have said, in your cabin on the Monotah, that I was the man he was after?"

She turned her head away.

"I did not know my brother was on the Monotah until he—he lay dying in my cabin," she answered.

He stared at her in amazement. "I don't understand," he said blankly.

"I did not understand then myself," she said; "but, thought it is quite clear to me now, I don't see why I should explain anything to you—and yet"—she paused an instant in indecision, frowning out over the schooner's side—"and yet I suppose there is no valid reason why I shouldn't. My brothers special field was amongst the natives. He spoke I don't know how many languages and dialects. I have known him to live unsuspected in their quarters and villages as one of themselves for months at a time. We had left Singapore on the Monotah together. It"—her voice faltered a little—"it was to have been a holiday trip. A few days out from Singapore he received a code message by wireless from headquarters. I do not know what the message was, except that he said he had been detailed to a case, and that his holiday was there and then at an end. He left the ship at the next port, a little place called Malmochi, but insisted that I should continue the trip. Indeed, there was nothing else for me to do, and no other or quicker way of getting back to Singapore than by making the ground voyage with the Monotah. I did not see him again until, as I said, he fell dying on the floor of my cabin. I know now what he did. He went ashore with all his belongings at Malmochi, but, before the ship sailed, he came on board again in the character of that East Indian fakir. I should never have known that he was on the Monotah if it had not been for the danger the ship was in that night. He was coming to my cabin then to be with me at the last. I know that. Nothing else mattered then."

Bob Kingsley leaned suddenly, earnestly forward.

"Yes!" he said in quick, eager tones. "Yes, that's it! And I know now what that code message was about, and what his object was!"

"I have always supposed you knew!" she said monotonously.

He made a swift gesture with his hands as though to brush her remark aside.

"Will you tell me what he said when he gave you the idol?" he asked.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

"HE was dying," she answered in a low voice. "He was scarcely able to speak at all. He said: 'Headquarters—Singapore!' Nothing else."

Bob Kingsley was silent for a moment, apparently engrossed in restoring the pellet of paper to the idol's keeping, and in fitting back into place the pair of little carved ivory hands. Then he spoke abruptly:

"I told you on the beach at Aoru that there was a great deal more to the story, but you were too ill to listen then, even if you had been willing to do so. I am not going to tell you in detail all that story now, because I would rather you should hear it from the others whom you will believe where you will not believe me. But, briefly, it is this: One night a Chinese junk owned by a Chinaman named Hsi Yan attacked my uncle's house here at Kalawa." He pointed shoreward. "The house is over there to the left about two miles beyond that point. Later my uncle, Tom Kingsley, was found dead in an open boat at sea by Capt. Scarface, an old friend of both my uncle and my father. In my uncle's pocket were two little ivory idols—of which this is one. Capt. Scarface sent them to my father at Patua. Meanwhile the authorities were, I suppose, searching for Hsi Yan's junk—Hsi Yan himself having died mysteriously, but apparently from natural causes, in my uncle's house on the night of the attack. Then, when Scarface's report came in, the authorities no doubt concluded and rightly so it now seems, that the two idols were at the bottom of the whole affair. They knew these had been sent to my father at Patua, and—I am of course assuming this now, though I do not think from what followed that there is the slightest doubt about it—the code message they sent to your brother, because he was an officer in the secret service who happened to be then actually on a voyage that would take him to Patua, contained instructions to investigate the case. The night the Monotah reached Patua, bringing the mail which contained a letter and the idols from Scarface, and another letter from a neighbor of my uncle, giving an account of what was known to have transpired at Kalawa, our bungalow was broken into, and, though I had a bit of a fight there, the thieves, or so I thought then, stole both the idols. It was too dark to see who the thieves were, though I knew they were not Europeans."

He paused a moment, and smiled a little drearily. She did not seem to be giving him very enthusiastic attention—at least she had half turned her back, and he could not see her face at all.

"I am afraid I am taking too long," he said. "There was an old feud between Hsi Yan and my uncle, which also included my father and Capt. Scarface. It was rather apparent, then, that we had to deal with Chinamen, and, for obvious reasons which I will not go into, that the thieves had come to Patua on the Monotah. I did not know who they were; but, if I was to have any chance of catching them, I could not first arouse their suspicions and so put them on their guard. So I took the Alita, went to Tahola, and boarded the Monotah as 'Mr Moore.' I discovered the five Chinamen on board, who I have tried to make you believe really existed; and I discovered, but not until after your brother's death, that they had got only one of the idols that night at Patua—and that your brother had got the other at the same time."

She whirled suddenly around upon him.

"My brother! At Patua!" she exclaimed.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SILENT PARTNER

By ANNE HARDY.

FOR many seasons the bank by Thomas' Bridge had been Eddie Haynes' favorite spot for fishing. He naturally resented company, particularly that of a stranger. The man evidently resented it, too, for he stared at Eddie, his dark brows narrowed. Eddie's tawny eyes flashed defiance and he set his chin in a stubborn line. The stranger opened his mouth to speak, then closed it with a snap and turned back. Two lines were cast simultaneously into the stream.

Eddie got the first bite. His freckled face beamed with excitement, and he let out a yell and started to drag frantically at the line. But a sharp voice barked at him: "Hold steady! Stop yanking or you'll lose him, kid!"

Instinctively, the boy obeyed.

"Give him time," yelled the man again, now almost in Eddie's ear. "He's goin' up-stream—follow and don't yank on that line again! A whooper, he is!"

The interests of the two had suddenly converged. Fifteen minutes of breath-taking activity and suspense followed before the big fish was landed.

"Three pounds, Bud, if I know anything about trout," the stranger exalted. "You did some mighty fine work, dragging him in. Now, have lunch with me."

It was then that Eddie's heart really went out to the man. If he were to go home now—and he was hungry—Ellen would remind him of the woodpile, and his mother would have something to say about the vegetable garden, which he was supposed to keep weeded on Saturdays.

"Aw, guess I'd better run along," he objected politely. But the big man laughed, taking his fishy paw and hustling him to the hamper under the trees.

"You can't go out after supper," Ellen Haynes told her small brother that night. "Mother said before she left you were to get your lessons—and help me do the dishes, too—you won't get out of that!"

Eddie scowled darkly; here was a problem.

"But, can't I just run down to the hotel, see a feller for a minute, Ellen?"

"No, indeed," said Ellen firmly. So he had to wipe dishes—a woman's job!

With bare feet planted on the kitchen linoleum, he stood by the sink and snatched at each cup, saucer or plate Ellen lifted from the warm, soapy suds in the dishpan. But his mind was racing ahead of his task, and so engrossed was he in thought, he ignored Ellen's superior smile.

Suppose Mr. Gilbert left the hotel before 8 o'clock? Suppose he did not look carefully at his car before starting off into the hills?

A vivid picture flashed before Eddie's mind. An alley back of Gleason's poolroom. He should not have been there tonight, but boys have a way of investigating dark alleyways. He had seen two men talking there in furtive whispers, and had been moved to investigate them, too. So in the gathering dusk he had crept closer, listened as he crouched behind an ash-barrel. And the men had been talking of his new friend, Mr. George Gilbert!

No, he wasn't just here in Camden on a fishing trip, they said. He was on business. He would take the payroll up the hills to Sauer's new mill, and he would carry it tonight in his roadster—unarmed. They had laughed unpleasantly.

"At 8 o'clock—" one of the men had said as they turned and walked off, leaving an excited and mystified Eddie behind the ash-barrel.

He had hurried around to the hotel on Main street, been told that Mr. Gilbert was out, but would return later to supper. Ellen had his own supper ready at home, and he knew it was not wise to keep her waiting when his parents were away. Later he would return and see Mr. Gilbert, tell him about those men.

Eddie started out of his thoughts as the cup he was wiping slipped from his hands and crashed on the linoleum at his feet.

"How careless!" scolded Ellen. "Why don't you look at what you're doing and stop dreaming? Give me that towel and go do your lessons."

"I'm going to my room to study," said Eddie with sudden inspiration.

Ten minutes later he climbed through the window, slid down the porch roof and to the ground via the branches of the pear trees which had many times before afforded a means of egress. Up there in his room the bed lamp blinked on the table. He had locked the door against the possible snoopings of Ellen. Now he was off down the road toward Main street, his heart thumping wildly.

"Mr. Gilbert left some time ago, Eddie," said old Mr. Mason, the hotel keeper, stroking his drooping goatee. "Two fellers out there in the yard in an automobile just asked about him, too. What might you want with him, Eddie?"

"Nothing much," the boy said and sped away.

He slunk under the trees in the blackest shadows; only by the merest chance did he get into the car the men drove, for the driver choked the engine as they started and the other man had to get out and crank it. It was easy then for Eddie to squirm over the back of the car, unheard and unobserved, and lie flat in the bottom.

The little town, which by 10 o'clock usually settled down to sleep, awoke tonight with a sudden, furious alarm. Where was Eddie Haynes? Telephone lines buzzed, and Eddie's father, mother and sister hastened to the hotel to arouse the sheriff. Neighbors followed them, and 10 times Ellen tearfully related her last conversation with her brother, in which he had remarked that he would study in his room, where he would not be disturbed. She told how the door had had to be broken down after they had called and called to him to put out his light and go to sleep, and how the room was empty—just his schoolbooks on the table!

Then Mr. Mason, aroused from his daze of perturbation, remembered how Eddie had dashed into the hotel about 8 o'clock, asking for Mr. Gilbert.

"Mr. Gilbert," inquired Eddie's father. "Who's Mr. Gilbert?"

"A stranger here," replied Mr. Mason. "A guest of the hotel. A fine man, quiet and reserved. I saw your Eddie out fishing with him this afternoon."

Eddie's father turned upon Eddie's mother in a burst of baffled anxiety. "You shouldn't let the boy go about with strangers! The man's probably a crook of the worst sort—and has taken our boy away for some nefarious purpose!"

At this speech, Eddie's mother burst into a violent fit of weeping, and her neighbors tried to comfort her. Mary Williams, with whom she had a dispute just last week, put her arms about the stricken mother, and the two women sobbed together.

Every voice stopped and there was dead silence as a man strode into the lobby, clutching an old suitcase under one arm, piloting a sleepy boy with the other. Then Eddie's mother shrieked aloud and swept her boy into a warm embrace.

"I thought I'd run out of gas on the Bear Loop Trail, six miles from town," George Gilbert explained to a round-eyed group some moments later. "And just as I discovered that someone had plugged the feed pipe and was trying to fix it, I heard another car on the road behind me. I called, thinking whoever it was might help me out, and I saw two men getting out of a car that had stopped a few yards away. They rushed me all of a sudden, caught me off guard. I knew then they were after the payroll I had in the car, taking to Sauer's mill, and I tried to fight them off, but I didn't have a chance."

"What happened then?" asked Eddie's father. "Where was Eddie, and how—"

"I found that out 20 minutes later," George Gilbert explained. "They searched my car and got nothing. I, myself, thought the suitcase had bounced out along the way. So they cursed me in their disappointment, left me tied up and drove off. And after they'd gone, Eddie crept out from behind some bushes with the suitcase in his arms. I want to tell you, folks, I felt like shouting for joy, when I saw my little Silent Partner."

There was general exclamation and applause, during which Eddie slipped from his mother's side. He stood with his towsled head very high, his little chin lifted proudly, as his friend, George Gilbert, clasped his hand.

Maybe now his folks wouldn't think him just a kid

Day of Model Home Is Here

THE desire for better living conditions, to own a home if possible, has brought into being the "model home," sponsored by builders throughout the country. These homes are complete in every modern detail, furnished by expert interior decorators; landscaped correctly, even a motor is waiting in the garage. They establish the class of a neighborhood and assure home builders of protection of neighborhood conditions, and show what they are expected to live up to in their own planning.

To see a home of this sort furnishes ideas for planners. Each may deviate from the model in ways to fill his especial needs. But the modern labor saving devices, closets and conveniences, give a practical demonstration as to how they look, how much room they take up and silently answer all questions in the minds of investigators. The model house thus becomes a blessing to prospective home owners even if they cannot afford to buy the house outright as many people do.

In buying and building there are many things to determine—situation, traffic facilities, school, nearness of markets, postoffice, lighting, water waste and building restrictions. At the model house all these questions may be answered, another blessing the pioneer offers the prospector.

We naturally want all we can get for our money, and a visit to the house clarifies our ideas of what we want. We see that a breakfast nook is not a stuffy cubby hole, but a place where breakfast, luncheon and even small family dinners may be eaten comfortably, happily and with half the work that a large dining room of the old type demands. The living room has the table which may be used for formal meals, but the dining room in the small house is left out. There is the built-in ice box, the ice filled in from the outside, the iceman only a visitor on collection days.

Horoscopes

Sunday, June 24

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows propitious conditions for things of the spirit, for mythical and psychic investigations, but social affairs and dealings with superiors or those in authority have a degree of antagonism or discouragement.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of success with certain new projects in which finesse and stratagem may succeed rather than direct dealings. Employment is in jeopardy and social and domestic contacts may not gratify or thrive.

A child born on this day may have talents fitting it for diplomacy or subtle management of affairs rather than direct measures. Its judgment may be alert but personal equations may stultify.

Monday, June 25

MONDAY'S astrological forecast shows some baneful and disagreeable conditions which may prove disastrous to things generally unless the perseverance and the steadfastness of Saturn to fidelity and integrity be invincibly manifested. There are pitfalls of fraud and treachery which may lure to disagreeable situations unless warily approached.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which craftiness and failure to exercise the strongest probity may lead to calamity. But the assistance of slow and cautious judgment and good sense of Saturn may balance the menace.

A child born on this day may need rigorous training in integrity in order to avoid pitfalls. Properly trained and directed it will be responsible and diligent.

Nature in Rebellion Against All Shocks

PERHAPS you have noticed at a moving picture show that you have felt sick at your stomach. You may have imagined that your food had turned against you. In most instances, however, nausea appearing under such circumstances is caused by eye trouble.

DR. COPELAND

Lots of folks, even those who commute every day, suffer more or less from nausea, headache and occasionally, vomiting, whenever they ride in the cars. Car-sickness differs somewhat from sea-sickness. The latter is due to the peculiar effect upon the internal ear of the "swells" or "long rolls" of the sea.

What are called the "semi-circular" associated with the internal ear, are certain spaces filled with fluid and which act as spirit levels to determine our place in space. The pronounced movements of the ship on a rolling sea make undue demands upon these organs and the symptoms of sea-sickness develop.

To some extent the same causes operate in producing car-sickness. But in this condition there are other more important factors. The most common of these is eye-strain, usually from lack of balance of the eye muscles.

It is perfectly natural to read on the cars, or to spend the time looking out of the windows at the rapidly shifting scenery. In either case you are under the necessity, every moment, of changing the focus of your eyes and of turning them in different directions. The same necessity exists in looking at a moving picture screen.

These experiences bring to notice the least failure of accurate adjustment of the focusing and moving of the eyes. Strain, which would hardly be noticed in the ordinary uses of the eyes becomes very unpleasant, and results in all the symptoms of what we call car-sickness.

In car-sickness, as in sea-sickness, it is hard sometimes to be sure the trouble isn't a plain case of indigestion. Sea-sickness, which is much more pronounced than car-sickness, is unmistakable in that the face and ears of the victim have a peculiar greenish, almost transparent appearance.

In persistent car-sickness the eyes should be examined to see if glasses are needed. This is not complete unless the muscles of the eyes are tested. The seeing power may be above the average, but the muscle adjustment may be very defective.

Should the eyes prove to be all right, then the ears should be examined to see if everything is normal.

There is usually some underlying cause for car-sickness, but once in a while an apparently perfectly healthy individual is found who can never swing in a hammock, ride backward on the cars, or get on a train without nausea. For such there seems to be no cure, but the average case can be overcome as I have suggested.

Junior Is Found With the Red-Bearded Transvanian

OUR eyes followed Katie's shaking hand as she pointed down the woodland road along which we were searching for Junior. The path, usually dipping and winding, ran comparatively straight from the spot where we were standing, and silhouetted against the trees several rods away we saw the massive figure of the red-bearded Transvanian who with his comrade occupied the shack in the woods. He had just come round a curve in the path, and Junior was clinging tightly to his hand while the puppy frolicked around them.

We were all out of the car the next second, and hurrying down the path. Fortunately, I had stopped the machine at a place where it was easy to turn it around, a matter of difficulty if we had proceeded further down the old road.

I knew, of course, as soon as I saw the red-bearded giant's protective attitude toward Junior that our fears for the boy's safety at the hands of our queer neighbors had been absurd. But they were no more fantastic than the behavior of the red-bearded man when he caught sight of our advancing figures.

He stopped short, released Junior's hand, pointed to us, apparently gave him a quick command and then, wheeling, struck into the thick undergrowth at the side of the road, and a second later was out of sight.

Someone behind me caught her breath quickly, but at the moment I was incapable of enough coherent thought even to try to identify the source of the sound. I wanted only one thing at that moment, to clasp my little lad close and assure myself that he had come to no harm. Swiftly I ran down the path, calling his name.

But Junior, with a manner wholly unlike his usual exuberance when meeting me, did not run toward me. Instead, he stopped short and looked wildly around as if he contemplated following the example of the red-bearded man. But he stood his ground, and when I reached him and seized him in my arms, I read the reason for his slowness in his troubled eyes.

"Honest, Mother, I didn't mean to go away alone," he said remorsefully, "but Patsy was chasing a cat and I was afraid he'd kill her, and he wouldn't stop when I called him, and he kept going farther and farther and pretty soon I was at the big red man's house. What are you going to do with me, Mother? I'a'pose I ought to have a whacking."

But his voice held no fear that he would receive the punishment he suggested, and in my relaxation from fear I had all I could do to keep from irretrievably spoiling discipline with a laugh.

"No, I am not going to whack you," I told him. "Just now, when I have worried so much over you, to switch you would hurt me much more than it would you. Besides, you are getting too old for switchings. These are only for little puppies and children too young to know what they are doing. I must think up something else, something which will make you remember not to run away again. But we won't talk any more about it now. We'll go home and have some lunch, and then we'll talk it over."

Junior looked at me gravely.

"I'd rather know now," he said.

"I know you would," I returned, "but that is part of your punishment. I will tell you what it is as soon as I decide."

I heard a decided sniff behind me, and knew that Katie was expressing as positively as she dared, her disapproval of any punishment for the small boy she adores. Then came Lillian's voice, oddly hesitant, a bit roughened.

"May I speak to Junior by himself a minute, Madge, please!"

Pirate Attack Returns and If It Stays Team Will Climb—Grimes Third Pitcher in Majors to Win 10 Games—McLarnin Back On Road to Another Title Match.

THE Pirate attack came back to life yesterday, and with 15 hits and 11 runs to their credit at the conclusion of the lop-sided game with the sliding Reds, Donie Bush's players looked more like themselves than they have for some time.

Bill Burwell

That has been the principal fault in the Buccaneer machine of late—lack of hitting. The pitching has been good enough in the main, barring Carmen Hill's bad inning on Thursday, but the Bucs had not been producing the attack that was rated as the most consistent in the league.

If it has come back to stay it might be well to keep an eye on the league champions here on in. They are two games below sixth place, but they are not going to stay there.

IT is refreshing to watch Burleigh Grimes pitch, and the confidence of the home rooters goes up many points when Burleigh walks to the slab. Grimes has pitched great ball all season, but he has been particularly good since Charley Hargreaves was given the assignment of handling him.

Hargreaves handles the spitball delivery of the Minerva (O). citizen in fine style and Burleigh is able to get the best of results with his old Brooklyn mate. And Hargreaves, incidentally is looking better to Pittsburgh fans as a catcher with each succeeding day, no matter whom he is handling.

YESTERDAY'S victory was the tenth of the season for Grimes, and as the season is less than two-fifths over he has a good chance to win from 20 to 25 games.

Only two other pitchers in the big leagues beat Burleigh to the 10-victory mark. Larry Benton of the Giants has won 11 and lost 3, and Sammy Gray of the Browns has won 10 and lost 5. Grimes' record is 10 wins and six defeats.

The strongest evidence of the high quality of Grimes' pitching is the fact that he has been scored on in only three of the last 32 innings he has pitched.

Carl Mays

EDDIE ROUSH of the Giants is not the only famous baseball veteran upon whom waivers have been asked. Carl Mays, former Boston and New York star in the American League, and a Red since 1924, is another.

No club will claim Roush on account of his high salary, and it is a question whether any club will claim Mays. He has won four and lost two games this season, but has been suffering from arm trouble lately, and it is not certain that any club will care to take a chance with him.

The Pittsburgh management is not interested in Mays, and doesn't think he would help the Bucs, Manager Bush said, though Donie intimated that if the veteran were a left-hander he might be able to use him right now, with Fussell th only southpaw on the staff.

JIMMY M'LARNIN, the "baby face" of the prize ring but with the dynamite of a welterweight in his right mitt, advanced a huge stride toward another match with Sammy Mandell for the lightweight championship by the manner in which he knocked out Phil Karmanos, better known as Phil McGraw, the Greek.

An idea as to the power of McLarnin's wallop may be gathered from the fact that he stopped a man who had never

SPEAKING of SPORTS

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

I HAD a sort of a hunch that this might be Johnny Farrell's year in the National Open, but it doesn't appear to be. Johnny is a sort of contradictory cuss. Year after year he goes his way, cleaning up one big tournament after another and maintaining his position up there among Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen and the other topnotch pros, but he has yet to win a National Open. One of these seasons he'll annex that honor, too; perhaps the same year he fails to win the best dressed golfer prize.

STRANGE as it may seem, there was no reaction in Wall Street when the United States lost the Wightman cup a few weeks ago, and yet this trophy corresponds, for the women stars, with the Davis Cup for the men in the tennis world. Perhaps the fact that Helen Wills won both of her singles matches lessened the sting somewhat, but the real reason for the seeming indifference on the part of the world at large over the defeat of the American forces at Wimbledon is that the trophy hasn't been in competition long enough for us to have become Wightman Cup-conscious. It lacks the historic and traditional background of the Davis Cup. It dates back only to 1923, and has been won three times by the United States and thrice by Great Britain. Twenty-five years from now we may expect the average reader to pick up his newspaper and gasp: "My gosh—we've lost the Wightman Cup again!" and know what it's all about.

IN New Castle (not the one to which they carry coals) workmen today will complete the job of making ready a new boxing bowl conceived by the sports promoter of that town, one Bill Jolly. It will seat some 7,000 persons and is said to be quite the cat's. Built with an eye to the comfort of the fans, it is 11 rows high and has about 800 reserved ringside seats with the backs numbered. There are three entrances and as many ticket offices, with comfortable dressing rooms for the boxers, a private police system, with Patrolman Tommy Lynch in charge, and a lot of other wrinkles, not forget-

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER IN LEAGUE

That's what Paul Waner, star of the Pirates, was labeled last year, his second full season in the major leagues, and, as a result, he was rewarded with $1,000 in gold coins by President John A. Heydler before the start of today's game at Forbes Field. Pictures show Waner in various poses, including that of a first baseman. He demonstrated his versatility by jumping in at first base when Grantham was injured. His regular position is right field.

FIRST IN FIVE DEPARTMENTS

Paul Waner's record for last season, when he beat out Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals for the most valuable player prize in the National League, was a remarkable one. He led the circuit in five departments of play. He was the batting leader with an average of .380; made the most hits, 237; most triples, 17; most total bases, 338, and drove in the most runs, 131. He was second in doubles, with 40, and third in runs scored, with 113, and he struck out only 14 times in 155 games. If that isn't enough to justify the award of the bag of gold pieces, then name your own candidate!

WELL, the 150 mark has been passed by two and the entries for the first annual Sun-Telegraph West Penn amateur junior golf tournament, to be held at the Schenley Park municipal links on Thursday, July 12, are continuing to flood the golf tournament editor's desk. Thirty-one new competitors entered the field yesterday, bringing the total to 152.

One of the finest statements the Sun-Telegraph has received in regard to its tournament was given by John Jay Burke, executive committeeman, of the public links section, United States Golf Association, and city office manager for the new Allegheny County parks, yesterday. His message said:

"The junior tournament being sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph is unique in golf history. The rhythm and resiliency of the youthful golfer is the envy of the old-timers, and if the game is to be kept up to its high degree of perfection reached in Western Pennsylvania a few years ago, we must look to the

TILDEN BEATS HUNTER

LONDON, June 23.—(INS.)—William (Big Bill) Tilden, of the United States, beat Francis T. Hunter, also an American, by 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, in the singles final of the London tennis championships at Queen's Club this afternoon.

CRIMSON EIGHT BOWS TO ELI

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 23.—(AP.)—A great Yale varsity crew that traveled as if propelled by an unseen motor, overwhelmed Harvard's touted giants by the amazing margin of 10 lengths in their sixty-sixth annual regatta yesterday to gain the most crushing victory recorded in this classic race in recent years.

The Eli crew, youngsters that had been given barely an even chance to overcome a Harvard weight advantage of seven pounds to the man and win, electrified the thousands who lined the historic and picturesque Thames River course. The Blue machine overcame a Harvard lead gained in the first few strokes, slid to the fore in the first half mile and crossed the finish line more than half a minute ahead of the struggling and desperately splashing Harvard eight.

The official times were announced as Yale 20:21 3-5 and Harvard 20:56.

The varsity victory wound up a triumphant day of unalloyed suc-

NEW HURLER NAMED TO FACE REDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

AT least three feature acts are scheduled for Forbes Field this afternoon in connection with the final game of the series between the Pirates and Reds.

In the first place this is "Paul Waner Day." The premier batsman of the National League will be called to the plate before the game starts to be presented with $1,000, the presentation to be made by President John A. Heydler of the National League.

Mr. Heydler arrived in Pittsburgh this morning for the purpose of taking part in the ceremonies. The boss of the league brought with him a neat little sack containing enough gold pieces to make up the "one grand." Paul was voted the most valuable player in the National League last season, the honor carrying the prize specified here.

Another unusual headliner is seen in the pitching selection of the Pittsburgh club. Manager Donie Bush announced this morning that Bill Burwell, recently purchased from the Indianapolis club of the American Association, would be sent to Fogarty Knoll to start his first game as a Pirate.

BURWELL OWNS WIN

Hoosier Bill actually owns one Pittsburgh victory. While the Bucs were in Boston Burwell was hustled to the mound in the relief role and at the finish he was the winner. Since that time he has been resting, but the new flinger seems to be in rare condition and anxious to get some action.

Opposing Burwell will be that colorful twirler of the Reds sometimes referred to as Senor Adolfo Luque. Senor Luque has been doing the pitching trick a long time, nine in 34, one under par, bagging two birdies in a row, but taking a five on the ninth. This gave him 187 for 45 holes.

BOB BAGS BIRDIES GOING OUT

In the drizzling rain, Bobby Jones, with two strokes on the field, set out on his third round with stocky Gene Sarazen for his partner. Bobby was 10 strokes ahead of Gene to start with, 144 to 154.

A gallery of 1,500 was on hand despite the bad weather.

Jones, in white cap and heavy gym shirt, spanked a 275-yard drive down the middle, with the wind, but his second skidded seven feet over the slippery green. Carefully measuring his shot, Bobby chipped back a foot from the cup and holed a birdie four. It was the third time he had done it on this hole.

Sarazen, also just over the green, came within an eyelash of holing his chip and made the "bird" easily.

JONES STARTS WELL

Straight with his drive to the 455-yard second, Bobby again misjudged his second sclightly. It stopped on the edge of a trap to the right of the green. Out too strongly, he went three feet beyond the cup, but sank for his par four. Gene wasted a putt and took five.

The drizzle increased and Jones sought shelter under an umbrella that has all the colors of the rainbow in it. Tossing away his cigarette, Bobby laid his second dead to the pin on the 420-Yard third after another beautiful drive. The Georgian holed a 12-footer for a birdie three, the ball rimming the cup and dropping in from the back. Sarazen took four.

George VonElm, starting two strokes back of Bobby Jones, drove a full 300-yards on the first hole, 530 yards, and laid a spoon on the green. His approach putt was over, and coming back he rimmed the cup just missing a birdie four.

George had another great drive on the second, but his approach was just on, leaving him a long putt. He rolled it up dead and got par 4. Von Elm got another long drive on the third, but his approach hit the back of a trap. He blasted out nively, taking two putts for a five, going one over par.

WEDNESDAY NEW DATE SET FOR BOUT

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP.) — The 10-round heavyweight fight between Johnny Risko and George Godfrey, scheduled for tonight at Ebbets Field, has been postponed until next Wednesday night on account of threatening weather, Promoter Humbert J. Fugazy announced today.

It was the second time the bout had been postponed for the same reason. It was set originally for last Wednesday.

BOWEN, BUTLER REACH FINALS

CINCINNATI, June 23.—(AP.)—The 10,000-meter run only complete event on the opening program of the Allegheny Regional Olympic tryouts, failed by a wide margin to develop any threat against the time of 30 minutes, 23 1-5 seconds set by Willie Ritola of Finland, in winning the Olympic race in 1924.

Four runners entered the qualifier and Rufus Tankins of Braddock, Pa., won the race by 10 yards in 35 minutes, 9¼ seconds. Harold Bauer, Cleveland, was second, Ben West Cincinnati Y. M. C. A., third, and Joseph Mass, Cincinnati, unattached, fourth.

Two qualifying heats in the 400-meter dash were run. R. F. Bowen, Pittsburgh Athletic Association made the best time, winning the second heat in 49 seconds. Herbert Moxley, Negro high school athlete of Columbus, Ohio, took the first heat in 49 3-5 seconds. Lucas Miller, Louisville Y. M. C. A., and William Butler, Holy Cross A. C., Pittsburgh, qualified for the final by finishing second in the respective heats.

Three other Pittsburgh district stars, Welch, University of Pittsburgh discus star; Linn, national junior A. A. U. hammer champion and A. E. Rose, broad jumper will compete in the final events today.

Miss Payson shot splendid golf yesterday in the first round, finishing with a 39-43-82. Three strokes behind her came Louise Fordyce of Youngstown with 85 and after the Youngstown ace, Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago with 87. A half dozen of the large field broke 90.

Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, of Allegheny, West Penn titleholder, finished first among the Pittsburgh district entrants, with an 88 score.

suffered a knockout in his career. McGraw has been hit on the chin so often that it is a wonder he isn't walking on his heels, but the chin aforesaid must be made of armor plate, as in spite of numerous knockdowns he never was knocked down by any one until "Baby Face" did it.

Tommy Armour

A mere decision over McGraw would have meant no great boost for McLarnin, but a one-round knockout, the same kind he administered to Sid Ferris, puts him on the high road to another title match.

VETERAN golfers, headed by Tommy Armour, who won the big title at Oakmont last year, do not look for the winner of the United States open in Chicago today to have a low score.

When Armour was asked what he thought about the championship, he answered that putting would decide it and that he believes that a score of 292 would win the title.

Others were interested regarding the probable score and some of the answers follow:

Archie Compston—"It's a tougher course than any in England. Any score under 300 will win."

Audrey Boomer—"It's too hard a course to play. Anybody shooting 295 will win easily.

Joe Kirkwood—"I wouldn't be surprised if 300 would win. I'd be satisfied with a 300 card."

Gene Sarazen—"The winner's score looks like 295 to me."

Leo Diegel—"A score around 294 should win."

Bill Melhorn—"If some golfer can get all his shots working he can finish with a score of 292."

GEORGE GODFREY, the huge Negro heavweight, and Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy, are scheduled to meet tonight at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn in the bout postponed from Wednesday night. There is no change in the dope as it appeared on the day first set for the meeting. Godfrey has a tremendous advantage in weight, that advantage should suffice to win for him.

and if everything else were equal,

But while a demon to a lot of second-raters, Godfrey has been "not so good" against men of the caliber of Paulino, who are far removed from championship circles, and in spite of his disadvantages Risko has a chance to win tonight.

He has as his main bout a return meeting between Emmett Rocco of Ellwood City and Battling Levinsky, the former light-heavyweight champion, who recently grabbed a decision over the youngster at Akron. It looks like a big night for all concerned.

YESTERDAY, I wrote the views of Bull Brown, the local umpire, now in the American Association, anent the advisability of having three umpires handle championship games whenever possible. Strange that at the same time a reader of a New York paper should write protesting against the three umpires system in vogue in the major leagues. It is impossible to please everybody. After reading all of the nice things Bull had to say about the triplicate system of umping, get a load of this letter to the editor of the New York paper:

"TWO umpires are enough for any game. With three they all run around on a play and you can't follow the ball. When there are a couple of men on the bases and somebody bunts there's a crowd on the field like a three-alarm fire. The third base umpire gets in front of the third baseman and you can't see a play at third, and the first base umpire runs in front of the shortstop or second baseman and you can't see a play at second. Then the plate umpire puts his mask in one hand and his chest protector in the other and says to himself: 'Where can I stand where I can keep the most folks from seeing anything?' and he runs around in circles. Whenever there is a foul ball hit they all wave their arms and holler. It's a joke."

but age does not seem to dull the infinite variety of his skill.

With George Grantham back at post and Burleigh Grimes pitching in beautiful form, the Pirates yesterday gave the Reds a lacing, the final score being 11 to 1.

Something like 4,000 fans cheered Grimes and his mates as they treated themselves to the one-sided victory. Ten runs and 10 hits made in the first two rounds were more than enough to take the punch out of the ambitious Rhinelanders.

GRANTHAM HITS FOURTH

Ross Bush shook up his lineup before the game, Grantham going to the cleanup position while Glenn Wright dropped to the seventh notch. The new battle front worked like a charm in its first showing.

Manager Hendricks had no less than four pitchers on the mound against Grimes before two innings were over. Ray Kolp started, but didn't get anybody out. Jim Joe Edwards and Jimmy Beckman, going to the slab in the order named, were no more fortunate than was Kolp. But when Peter Jablonowsky ascended the hill the game took on the complexion of a real tussle. The polite Peter swapped punches with Grimes in a clever manner, but the Pirates were so far in front when Pete arrived there was small chance of a reversal. Grimes held the Reds to seven hits and recorded his tenth triumph of the season.

ANOTHER BOY ADDED TO M'BRIDE FAMILY

Al McBride, professional at the Schenley Park municipal golf links, yesterday was stalking around the clubhouse with his head held high and a broad grin spread over his face. Why? Because yesterday, folks, Mrs. Al McBride, one of our best women golfers at Schenley, presented Al with a bouncing baby boy. And now, Al, Jr., who is two and a half years old, isn't the only coming golfer in the McBride family.

SHOOT CARDED TODAY

A trophy shoot is carded for this afternoon by the Brookview Gun Club at the club grounds, Babcock boulevard, and the Brooks Farm road. The grounds may be reached by taking a Harmony Route car to Brooks Farm stop.

younger generation. As an official of the U. S. G. A. and as an old-time golfer, I indorse the idea heartily and wish you every possible success in your undertaking."

The Sun-Telegraph tournament will be played for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy and a number of other prizes in two divisions at 18 holes medal play. Any amateur, as defined by the United States Golf Association, 18 years of age or under, who is not attending a school of education above high school grades is eligible to compete; which also includes caddies who are not 16 yet, or who have not accepted money for caddying after their sixteenth birthday.

The Junior Class will be made up of boys between 15 and 18, and the Sub-Junior Class for boys 14 years of age and under. No matter which division he is playing in, the boy who shoots the lowest gross score cops the Hearst trophy—and it is a beautiful thing to behold.

The entry list will close on Monday, July 9, so there is little time to spare. Send a picture along with your entry if you have one—the Sun-Telegraph will return it after it has been used—and if you don't have one, come down to the Sun-Tele office and have one taken.

Let's see if we can't pull the entry list over the 200 mark by Sunday or Monday at the very latest. Come on, fellows this writer alone knows of a half dozen boys hanging back until the last minute to enter—do it now!

Watch for tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph for an added list of names to the entry already published.

cess for Yale, as in the morning races the Blue shirted freshmen downed the Crimson by two and a quarter lengths and Leader's heavy junior varsity won by four full lengths, both over a two-mile course up stream.

Yale's victory was its thirty-fifth in the 66 races in which these rivals have engaged.

FAVORITES VICTORS IN NET TOURNEY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

BILLY O'LOUGHLIN, diminutive Shady Side Academy net leader and Pittsburgh Center junior titleholder, stepped out to furnish the feature of the Western Pennsylvania racquet championships on the P. A. A. courts yesterday.

Flashing spectacular form in a brilliant twilight battle with Al Bialas, crack Winged Head luminary, "Little Bill," tipping the beam at scarce 100 pounds in his tennis togs, unslung so vicious a forehand attack that his older and more experienced opponent was compelled to give ground after a terrific driving tilt and accept the short end of a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 verdict that advanced the youngest of the famed O'Loughlin trio into the quarter-finals.

Byron Baur, Erie youth and defender of the West Penn crown, likewise alvanced into the bracket before the semi-finals, though not until he had been pushed to a set-point by Jack Lauler, dashing P. A. A. performer, who displayed bits of the finest tennis of his career in dropping a 7-5, 6-4 decision. Paul Barber, scintilliant Sewickley boy, also atttained the round of eight, after a stubborn tussle with Leo Mason, 7-5, 6-3.

Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. net captain and victor in the local conclaves of 1925 and 1926, carved out impressive third-frame triumph over Dick Table, smashing Pitt blonde, 6-0, 6-2.

Contestants in the women's singles division will whirl into formal action at the Pittsburgh Golf Club at 10 o'clock this morning, men's singles to be resumed at the P. A. A. and at the golf club an hour later. Men's doubles will start at 1 p. m.

By B. C. FORBES

THE tumble in the stock market greatly astonished a lot of people, you discover when you travel around. I have been covering much ground this week and, talking with all classes, have discovered that nearly everybody was sure stocks would continue to rise and rise. One man confessed that a list of stocks he purchased within the last two months now show him a loss of a quarter of a million dollars.

"I read your column regularly," he told me, "but you had been advising caution for a long time, so I concluded you would continue to be wrong on the market. So I went full steam ahead."

Then he asked, "How long do you think it will be until the market fully recovers and sells higher than ever before?"

"Your idea that it will snap back any day and boom better and bigger than ever may prove more correct than my idea," I replied. "My guess is that the cream has been skimmed off the speculative bull market. I seriously doubt whether the last peak will be matched again between now and November. In fact, I am inclined to think stocks which have been boomed will sink to still lower levels."

THAT'S a terribly unpopular attitude, I know. But losing a quarter of a million dollars or even $1,000 in stock speculation is not a particularly enjoyable experience, and if one can conscientiously do even a little to avert such disasters, then popularity or unpopularity can be left to take care of itself. After all, people buy or sell stocks in the hope of making money. Whoever can contribute toward this end need not bother about temporary criticism. Bullish counsel that ends in losses inspires no lasting friendliness.

THE writer has often been dubbed "the perennial optimist." There are so many more times in this country that one can be optimistic than there are times when one must urge caution, that it is entirely logical to come to be regarded as an out-and-out optimist. But there do come times to weep rather than to laugh.

IN Detroit some of those who have glittering visions of the future of flying are buying Packard Motor shares instead of the shares of aircraft companies which have been skyrocketed dizzily. This because Packard is producing aircraft motors on a very considerable and very profitable scale. Anyone who invested $1,000 in Packard at the beginning of 1923 would have seen it increase in value, including dividends, to fully $10,000.

THAT candidate Hoover will have a walk-over is not by any means the universal opinion in the East. When the religious issue is raised in reference to Gov. Smith's chances in the South, the reply usually given is, "The South is Democratic before it is anything else." It is argued, too, that every Catholic in the United States, regardless of his regular political affiliations, will vote for Smith if, as expected, he is nominated.

One cannot but ask what would be the effect, especially on the stock market, if doubts concerning the retention of a Republican administration were to become general. The question is worth keeping in mind.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., "Invites the world to come up a mile and smile a while on July 1, 2, 3, 4," when the oldest-established cowboy rodeo in America will be most elaborately staged. The writer guarantees this rodeo to be the real thing.

EDSEL FORD, you find, is one of the most popular men in his home city of Detroit. He is credited with having distinct business ability. He has not the autocratic tendencies of his illustrious father. He has a faculty for getting along well with other men. He is not in the slightest purse-proud. He applies himself diligently to business, yet has learned how to relax and make himself agreeable socially.

You are told by men in the motor industry that a reassuring answer can be given to the often-asked question, "What would happen to the Ford Motor Company should Henry Ford pass on?" Edsel, they declare emphatically, knows the business from beginning to end and would doubtless gather around him a force of absolutely top-notch executives.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, June 23.—Better weather in Kansas and favorable conditions northwest with lower prices at Liverpool had an early bearish effect today on the wheat market here. St. Louis reported arrival today of the first car of new wheat from Oklahoma. Starting 1c to 1¼c off, Chicago wheat kept near to the initial range. Corn and oats were relatively firm, corn opening unchanged to ⅛c down, but subsequently scoring some advance. Provisions held about steady.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

MENTION THE SUN-TELEGRAPH WHEN ANSWERING ADVERTISEMENTS

GENERAL LIST IS STEADY

Establishment of a new high price for the year on Standard Sanitary Manufacturing preferred was the only notable incident on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short week-end session today.

Demand for this stock, as well as other seasoned investment issues, has been stimulated by the recent reactionary tone of the general market, and traders were not inclined to attribute today's rise in Standard to any special development. At 130, today's price, Standard Sanitary preferred yields a little better than 5 per cent, which, while not particularly attractive in the present money market, compares favorably with some of the other preferred stocks of similar rating during the high markets of the past few months. Future trend of the money market, of course, will determine the selling levels of the general run of such securities, but, as many observers are expecting a return to low borrowing rates later this year, the yields on good preferred stocks will work lower if the expectation is realized. Standard preferred is not subject to call. It has paid regular dividends since 1901.

Recent trading favorites were rather quiet, and prices were practically unchanged. The Arkansas Gas issues ranged around previous levels, and Lone Star was handled in moderate volume around 51½. Demand for Dixie Gas was thin, and offering of a block of the stock brought a decline to $10 a share as compared with the last previous sale at 12, about 10 days ago.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Further Weakness in Bancitaly.

Further weakness in Bancitaly Corporation shares on the New York Curb unsettled the list on the "big board," and there was some rush selling of the big speculative favorites following the further collapse in Giannini's investment trust. Bancitaly opened with a block of 20,000 shares at 10⅝, off 10½ points from last night's close. As there had been talk in the Street that the Bancitaly situation had been cleared up, today's slump was an unwelcome surprise and created considerable nervousness in stock market circles generally. Reassuring statements as to the company's condition have been issued from time to time by associates of Giannini and by the banker himself, now visiting in Italy, but selling has been persistent and each recovery has been followed by declines to lower levels than before.

Trade Conditions Spotty.

Bradstreet's weekly trade review says: "Weather, crop and trade advices still reveal marked irregularities, with an excess of rainfall delaying crop ripening or cultivation in the Southwest and Central South, where, as further North in the upper winter wheat, and entire spring wheat area, the rains, while retarding trade, have seemed to work for basic improvement in crop prospects, and therefore to have improved the business outlook for more further future, a spell of good weather at the end of last and the early part of this week had a stimulating effect on final distribution of apparel in the Central West, the Middle States and New England. On balance, it would seem as if trade distribution proper were now fully equal to or ahead of a year ago, whereas factory and mill operations, owing to curtailment in textile lines, an easing in iron and steel operations and relative quiet in branches of the leather, shoe and future industries, are rather below a year ago. Weekly bank clearings, $13,080,140,000, an increase of 32.4 per cent over last year."

Los Angeles Gas.

Gross earnings of Los Angeles Gas and Electric for the year ended May 31 were $21,321,829 against $20,237,134 the year before. Net, after all charges, was $4,229,972. After preferred dividends, a balance of $3,678,102 was available for common stock, all of which is owned by Pacific Lighting Corporation. Net showed a decrease of $194,758 for the year, owing to a liberal depreciation write-off of $2,538,373.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 23.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 13 to 18 points. All months made new high ground for the movement on a continuation of the recent buying movement, stimulated by unfavorable features in the weather news and reports that bullish crop advices were coming in from the southwest.

October contracts sold up to 21.69c before the first hour, within 9 points of the high price touched on May 1, the general list showing net advances of 19 to 23 points.

Liverpool failed to meet yesterday's local advance, but the relatively easy cables which were attributed to realizing seemed to be without much effect at the opening here.

Cotton in shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was 83,792 bales, against 74,638 last year.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Sir:

I've been working for the Standard Oil Company. One day a big Greek came in and asked me to fill up his tank, while he went on an errand across the street. When he came back he asked me how much gas it took. I replied, "Sixteen gallons." He looked at me for a moment and then said, "It only holds ten."

Pupils as Well as Tutors Benefit by Frick Gift

Pittsburgh school children are the indirect but certain beneficiaries of the summer course scholarships distributed among 615 public school teachers of Pittsburgh as a gift of the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission. The monetary value of the scholarships is estimated at $125,000, but who can guess the value of an oak tree that will arise where an acorn is planted!

The recipients of these scholarships, of course, are the direct beneficiaries and the cultural improvement they will receive in various universities, ranging from California to London and Oxford and other European institutions, will make their own lives more complete and fit them for greater service calling as educators. Ultimately pupils under their care ve imparted to them much of the effect of this wonder- efaction.

The Frick Educational Fund annually gives these scholarships, one of the finest and most inspiring things periodically brought to our attention.

Governor Is in Favor Of State Airport Plan

Gov. Fisher and his cabinet have approved a suggestion of Samuel Eckles, chief engineer of the Department of Highways, that the state acquire lands in various parts of the commonwealth to be used as airports. It was stated the Aeronautics Commission has under consideration a number of available sites. Eight landing places are tentatively proposed.

The Highway Department, Aeronautics Commission, state police and other agencies will be represented on a committee to make a preliminary study and draft legislation for consideration of the next general assembly. Interested individuals and organizations will be consulted in order to unite all interests in a central plan and reduce possible opposition to bills to be put before the legislative bodies of the state.

The move is a progressive one, which, if it can be kept free from political man-handling, should be of immense benefit to the state, placing it foremost among minor governments fostering and developing aerial transportation. It would hearten communities which are going ahead with airport acquirement and aid in making the commonwealth a leader in aerial ways, as it is in state roads.

Don't Be Peevish, Sir

Every Country Is "God's Country."

Sir Charles Higham, who is in the tea business, visiting the United States, discovers that it is "not God's own country any longer." He saw poverty here, restless people seeking pleasures, unemployment. He cannot understand why Americans call this "God's own country."

The learned Sir Charles should know that every nation considers its own land "God's own country." The Chinese call theirs "the Middle Kingdom," because they believe it is in the middle of the earth.

The Jews of ancient times considered their little country God's own country and considered themselves "God's chosen people." What they thought about themselves, and what some Americans think of themselves now, ALL savage peoples have thought.

And that's a good thing, adding dynamic energy to self-approval.

If we knew, as individuals and nations, how LITTLE we really amount to, progress would stop.

Perhaps there is no particular reason why it should NOT stop, but Providence has wound us up and we must go as we are wound.

Using the Roofs

America Needs This Lesson.

A MOTOR TRACK 200 FEET IN THE AIR

This shows the roof of an automobile factory in Turin, Italy, used as a secret testing ground for cars, and for test races between different cars.

This track, absolutely safe, 200 feet in the air, utilizes space that would otherwise be wasted, and makes absolutely secret tests possible.

If an airplane should come along to "spy," the cars would stop.

Cars reach the roof from the street by a spiral runway, a good test of second or third gears.

The Italians, under Mussolini, are a people of tremendous progress, industrially, agriculturally and otherwise.

They are using in industry the heat of their volcanoes, also turning waterfalls into electric power, and THEY WORK HARD.

We ought to learn a lesson from our Italian friends. And our great cities, where millions of children play in the shadow, darkness and danger of crowded streets, should have playgrounds built for them on sunlit roofs.

HANDS OFF!

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Perhaps the most hazardous of all Manhattan occupations is that of the steel workers who play such an important part in flinging skyscrapers up to the clouds. Yet in proportion to their numbers there are fewer casualties than among taxi drivers.

The steel workers are mostly in their twenties and, as might be expected, are robust and healthy young fellows without the quality known as emotional. The majority are cigaret smokers, but that is the extent of their submission to habits. They are well paid and usually thrifty.

Their immunity from danger lies almost wholly in the mental detachment from the risks they take. Once they begin thinking of the perils of the job they are in jeopardy. The sensible who find themselves indulging such a mood knock off work and go to the movies.

When one of them now and then misses a step and ricochets to disaster, all work on the building under construction is suspended for the day. Their greatest handicap is in working in high winds and on unusually blowy days they refrain from work.

Premonition is a fetish. Friday the thirteenth is anathema. And like those who flirt with death in the circus arenas, superstition is strong. When the Woolworth tower was under construction there is the story of the black cat found one day on a beam at the thirtieth floor.

Work was held up for two days. There is also the legend of the beam walker who walked under a ladder on his way to work and decided to call it a day. His fellows tried to laugh off his fears and induced him to go to work. A half hour later he toppled to his death.

Most of them are said to have been raised on farms where they acquired an early sturdiness and physical poise. Any number have gone to Hollywood, where their dizzy didoes are featured in movie thrillers, and where they are known as "stunt men."

As one fond of New York but with a "pash," too, for the outland, I think the greatest fallacy concerns the general belief west of Jersey City that New York has a fanatical worship of money. You rather expect to see gentlemen in silk hats praying to a dollar bill on the street. A rich man in a smaller city is an important nabob and people look up to him in a way New York never does. He generally has his way about most things, socially and otherwise. But a millionaire in New York is of no more importance than an onion in Bermuda.

I have seen a few New York millionaires hanging to the outside ropes for admittance to cafes and supper clubs. That would never happen in a smaller city. The small town millionaire's prominence and wealth automatically unlock all the doors. He is welcomed everywhere. New York makes its genuflections alone to the spender. If he happens to be a millionaire, well and good, but he doesn't get front row tables, choice theater seats and such just because he is a millionaire.

* * *

There is the specious theory, too, that you can pry into the upper crust of New York society with wealth alone as a jimmy. While what is known as the Four Hundred is in reality about Forty Thousand there is a creme de la creme of society, rock-ribbed and impervious to assaults of the nouveaux riche. This refers to that fragmentary remains of the once illustrious band that always repulsed the climbers and is still presided over by the dowager Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Wealth makes no impression on them. They hold the aristocratic fort, despite the fact that many notable ancestors peddled polecat skins, manufactured fertilizer, and half-soled their breeches with leather.

Having lived in almost every sized place from the cross roads to the Big Town, I am convinced New York leads in giving a poor man "the breaks." The small town is always critical of a newcomer with a flat purse. All a poor man needs in New York is a tuxedo and the gift of gab. And don't I know!

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

About Small Telescopes

"There are telescopes advertised for sale, 'made in France,' length extended 41½ in., diameter of object-glass 2½ in., magnifying power 45 times; there are others, 35 power, 56 millimeter diameter objective, length extended 42½ in. Price from $18.50 to $24.50. When purchasing tools pertaining to my trade I know how to buy but in picking out a telescope I am stuck. I am considering the purchase of one of these glasses, but how am I to tell if it will prove satisfactory, and can I get a glass worth while at these prices?—E. W. Herger, Yonkers."

I ASSUME that you wish to use the telescope for astronomical observations and, having in my younger days been in a similar perplexity, I am glad to give you the result of my experience. Very good small telescopes of from 2½ to 3 inches diameter of object-glass have been made in Europe for many years. But those that are the most useful for observation of astronomical objects are not "folding" ones, such as you describe, but little telescopes in brass tubes, three to three and a half feet in length, mounted on tripod stands, in what is called the "alt-azimuth" manner, which gives facility of movement both horizontally and vertically. These telescopes are suitable for use with magnifying powers as high as 100 diameters, or occasionally a little higher. Their price in pre-war days used to be about $60 to $75, including at least two eye-pieces giving different powers.

I have never owned one of these glasses, but have seen some in the possession of friends that were truly of excellent quality. My first telescope was made in New York by an Irish genius, long since dead, John Byrne, who learned the art of grinding telescope lenses from Lewis M. Rutherford, a well-known astronomer of the past generation. It had an object-glass of 3¾ inches, with several eye-pieces magnifying from 35 to 150 diameters. It was carried by a tripod stand and an "equatorial mounting," which is in some ways superior to the "alt-azimuth" in following the motion of stars. But it is also more costly.

The entire cost of my telescope, including the eye-piece and a "total reflecting prism" (which is a most convenient device enabling the observer to use the instrument without having to put his head in chancery in order to get his eye in the axis of the telescope tube), was about $175—more than 40 years ago. It was worth to me every cent that it cost. Dollars are not as expensive nowadays as they were then, and prices, I suppose, are proportionally higher. Frequently a good second-hand glass of high quality may be found. They do not wear out like automobiles.

But I do not wish to give the impression that a telescope with all the refinements that my first one had, is necessary for a beginner. The alt-azimuth mounting you ought to have, but you can dispense with the equatorial. You need not have quite so large an object-glass; one of two-and-a-half, or three inches will answer very well. You can get along with two eye-pieces, one magnifying say 25 to 30 times, the other 75 to 100. But you must be sure to get a "well-corrected" object-glass, and how you are to tell that, unless you can get the aid of some friend who knows something about telescopes, I am rather at a loss to say. But then your training with tools should have given you a correct eye and a good general judgment of things, so that you may do very well by studying such a book as Webb's "Celestial Objects for Common Telescopes," a classic on this subject. You may find this in any large library. There are also more recent, smaller works, which you may look over in a library or a scientific book store.

In speaking of more expensive glasses I do not mean to suggest that one of those that you are thinking of may not serve a good purpose for viewing such easy objects as the moon, some of the larger star-clusters, a few easy double stars, a glimpse of the ring of Saturn, etc., but if you want a real astronomical instrument I cannot affirm that anything less than such a one as I have just described would give lasting satisfaction.

Never Saw a Tree

ENGLAND is interested in the case of an intelligent young girl of 17, who, until a few days ago, had never seen a tree. She had lived all her life on the island of St. Kilda, on the outer edge of the Hebrides, 100 miles off the Scottish coast. "Trees," she said, "are exciting. They look like the pictures."

Once Overs

"Dropping In" Too Much

SOME women are too neighborly. There is the kind of woman who never seems to be busy in her own home.

She runs into the homes or apartments of her neighbors nearly every day.

Perhaps she gets her work done quickly, or possibly she is not particular about the appearance of her own home.

At any rate she seems to have more time for gossiping than the majority of other women.

For that is about all these frequent visitors have to offer.

It is not often they bring anything valuable to hear.

There are many women who use their leisure for something more profitable than gossip.

They read and study—work out plans that require time and careful thinking.

The woman who is constantly "running in" is usually looked upon as one of the pests of the neighborhood.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Stranger

WE long had journeyed side by side,
The world is fair, the world is wide,
And evermore
Some distant shore
Kept calling over wind and tide.

His inmost self I should have known,
His thoughts should have been as my own,
So near, it seemed,
The dreams we dreamed,
So much akin our lives had grown.

The years for long the truth concealed
(Sweet fruits the lying years may yield!)
Till chance one day
Stripped masks away
And there a stranger stood revealed!

Isn't It So?

Every woman is a judge and jury unto her own husband.

It costs more to be stingy than it does to be charitable.

Better a close-mouthed friend than a close-fisted enemy.

Solitude frequently surrounds the man who is alone with his thoughts.

Some snobbish people would rather be foolish than have sense of the common kind.

The man who never told a lie is foolish to risk spoiling his reputation by saying so.

Some men make more noise in doing a day's work than others make in a lifetime.

Probably some man whose wife refused to laugh at his alleged jokes was the first to discover that women have no sense of humor.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THIS happened in the mountains of Tennessee, according to the story, but I don't believe a word of it. You can't find any politer people than the ones you find in Tennessee, so I know there must be some mistake about putting the story in that state.

But this is how it was. A farmer and his wife went over the hills to get some stuff to eat in the little town, and then they went back again. The man rode on a donkey, and the woman walked. When they were going home, the woman was carrying the groceries.

A tourist from Harvard was out studying the customs of the natives, and he stopped the farmer and says, "How come you ride on the donkey and your wife walks and carries the grub?"

The farmer thought it over a while, and then he says, "Well, I reckon it's because my wife ain't got no donkey."

The Test

THE professor, a noted botanist, had given instructions that a dish of mushrooms he had gathered himself were to be cooked and given to his wife at supper-time.

At breakfast on the following morning the professor greeted his wife anxiously.

"Sleep well, my dear?" he asked.

"Splendidly."

"You didn't feel ill at all during the night? No pains or anything like that?"

"Of course not, dear."

The professor gave a shrill cheer.

"Hurrah!" he cried. "I've discovered yet another species of mushroom that isn't poisonous."

Taking Every Precaution

NERVOUSLY and with many misgivings the old lady hailed a passing taxi. It drew to the curb.

"Driver," remarked the old lady, "I want you to take me to the station."

"Yes, ma'am," said the driver.

"And you must drive slowly and carefully. Don't go until the policeman lowers his arm, and please don't rush round the corners, as the road is very wet and we might have an unpleasant skid."

The taxi-driver was getting angry.

"All right, ma'am," he said. "But if we do 'ave a baccident, is there any perticler 'orspital you'd prefer?"

No Comparison

A CERTAIN commercial traveler was in the habit of going to sleep in the train, and on one particular occasion tipped the guard to rouse him in case he ran past his destination.

Some two hours later he discovered that he had passed his station, and, finding the guard, he told that worthy precisely what he thought about him in no mean terms.

"Mah," said the official, when the angry passenger's anger had abated somewhat, "ye can swear a bit yersel', but it's naething tae compare wi' the man I put oot at Glendowrie."

His Love

"MISS JONES, I've been looking forward anxiously to this meeting—" began the young man, timidly.

"I'm sure you need fear nothing," was the girl's encouraging reply.

"Well, every man has one ruling passion in life, and I think you must have guessed mine by this time."

"I think I have."

"Well, Miss Jones, I came here tonight wondering if I dare ask you to coax your brother Tom to join our cricket club?"

Elocution

CANDIDATES for high office would be wise to begin voice culture soon. Not the kind that builds a bellowing roar or goes with the practice of gesticulation before a mirror.

The radio has ended all that. Its prizes are for the speakers who can enunciate clearly, put his thoughts over with a certain cadence and—most important of all—have something to say.

Responsibility for the Crime Wave

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

If you go deep enough you will generally find causes in the spiritual quality of a people, not in their outward actions.

It is supposed that the responsibility for the crime that exists is due to bad men. Some say it is the law's delays, some say it is dirty politics.

But the real cause lies deeper. It can be found in you and me. It can be found in a steady disregard for law and authority.

That there are some who honestly do not believe in the Prohibition Amendment is possible. We would not impugn the integrity of those who denounce it. They are well meaning.

But the trouble is that law is a one-piece garment. You can't make a hole in it one place and preserve its integrity in other places. You cannot enforce the laws against killing, arson, attack and so on and refuse to enforce the laws against prohibition.

Gen. Grant's remark was a wise one, that "the surest way to get rid of a bad law is to enforce it so that people can see how bad it is."

Bootlegging will go on just so long as there is money in it. Men will take any risks for profit. If the bootleggers had nobody to sell their stuff to there would be no bootlegging.

So the trouble is with you and me who buy the stuff from the bootlegger. This is a common practice and those who are guilty of it are guilty of tearing the fabric of the law that protects it.

You cannot stand out for the law in all other things and disregard it in this thing.

If you don't want your valuables taken, your house entered and robbed and your person attacked and your dear ones endangered, you must cease violating the law yourself.

The story is told of a certain judge who had his own bootlegger on trial before him. Whether this is true or not it illustrates the dilemma which we are in.

Stopping crime rests largely with you and me.

The best way to stop crime is to quit disobeying the law or abetting its disobedience.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

A CALIFORNIA woman, 129 years old (they always make them older than they have them in any other state) was interviewed the other day, and said that she liked the old days best because there wasn't so much hurry and rush.

But for 123 years the lady lived in Mexico where nobody ever rushes. There are too many cacti, and too many bare feet.

A woman 103, died in Toledo, and that city broadcasts the fact that, "survived by 16 children, 24 grandchildren and 24 great-grandchildren, the lady never saw a movie."

Someone should interview both Margaret Sanger and Will Hays.

There is some question about the news from Kansas City and Houston, that women care more for the conventions than they used to.

In New York:

She—"Dearie, let's take a taxi-cab."

Her—"Gracious no! John hates to wait. I've got to hurry."

Allen Maybee, chosen for the title of the handsomest man in Columbia University, is to be married, and the wedding notice says nothing about what the bride looks like.

It says the bridegroom has pearly teeth, beautiful red hair and sings in a choir.

It's almost too much.

A movie tragedienne, being interviewed, was asked what kind of perfume she used. And making her eyes look dreamy and speaking in whispers she said, "I won't tell you the name, but one of the ingredients is an oil that is made from the flowers from Cleopatra's tomb."

The reporter said she didn't know whether or not to feel that her intelligence had been insulted, because she didn't know where Cleopatra's tomb is, and whether or not flowers grow there.

"Is the perfume for sale?" asked the interviewer.

"Indeed not," said the actress looking hurt, "it is made only for me."

The reporter didn't even bother to tell the city editor.

Rewarded

ANOTHER type of flying was honored in Washington the other day—flights almost literally into and safely out of the jaws of death.

The hero was Lieut. C. Frank Schilt, aviator of the Marine Corps, and recipient at the President's hands of the coveted Congressional Medal of Honor.

Schilt last January, 10 times in three successive days, flew through bullets from Sandino's rebels to take food and ammunition to ambushed "devil dogs" and to bring out wounded comrades.

It was a voluntary service, typical of the bravery for which the Marine Corps are famous. It was an example of the spirit in which our boys in uniform are doing their arduous tasks in Nicaragua, fired at not only by bandits in the bush, but by snipers at home.

And the staging in front of the White House of a conspicuous ceremonial of appreciation is a fitting answer to those who would have the American people believe ill of such heroic men.

We do not give titles of nobility. Such gallantry is, however, its own testimonial.
